PLAN STRIKE OF 700,000 MEN

INTERNATIONAL PRESIDENTS OF UNIONS INVOLVED IN HARRIMAN LINE STRIKE BEHIND THE MOVE.

ALL THE WESTERN LINES

Railroad Officials Discredit Move As Dying Gasp of Harriman Line Strikers.

By United Press.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 16—The most far-reaching strike plans ever considered involving every class of union labor on every railroad west of the Mississippi almost 700,000 men, is the desperate expedient to force a victory over the Harriman railroads which is projected here tonight by a committee of labor leaders. The plan calls for a general strike of all shopmen, telegraphers, roadmen, clerks, road handlers and switchmen on all western railways to such an extension of the walkout to such eastern railroads which handle freight which may be moved by strikebreakers on the western carriers. Whether such a paralyzing blow to the railroads can be dealt rests of course with the telegraphers, roadmen, clerks, freight handlers and switchmen themselves.

The plan was reached, it was stated, three days after a secret conference of the international presidents of the big union of craftsmen now concerned in the Harriman roads strike. They left Chicago tonight for St. Louis, where they expect to hold secret meetings with the labor leaders of the unions whom they hope to induce to join to muster the strike.

Railroad officials tonight discredited the move of the unions as the "dying gasp" of the strike on the Harriman lines, a final bluff on the part of the five crafts involved in the present strike to "scare" the carriers into yielding.

NO INDICTMENTS IN POTTSBORO SHOOTING

By United Press

Sherman, Texas, Dec. 16.—On the night of October 25, 1911, Charles Allen was shot and wounded and his wife, Maudie Lee Allen, was arrested charged with the crime. Allen died October 28th. She did not deny the shooting, but stated Allen had threatened her life, and was trying to carry out the threat, Allen made a dying statement to County Attorney Cal. T. Freeman, duly signed and acknowledged, declaring his wife shot him first while he slept, and the other shots while he was trying to take the pistol away from her. He was shot five times. The grand jury met in Sherman this week and investigated the matter. It developed that Allen had served five years in the pen from Hill county for shooting at his wife and was intensely jealous of her. He had been out about three years. He was a railroad man. After examining about half the citizens of Pottsboro, the grand jury voted no bill, and each member of the grand jury "chipped in" a dollar and gave it to Mrs Allen who is a fine looking woman of thirty.

BIERBAUM WELL IN 28 FEET OF SAND ON DOUGLAS TRACT

A report from Electra tonight says that the Bierbaum well on the Douglas tract northeast of Electra is now in 28 feet of sand at a depth of 1780 feet with a fine showing of oil. This well is about a mile and a half northeast of Electra and the news was received with rejoicing by the oil men here tonight. It is expected that the well will be baled in early next week.

With this news also came a report that the Ninety Nine Pumping Company's well northwest of Petrolia which came in a few days ago with a great flow of gas will be drilled deeper at once

The week has brought good news from both ends of the great northwest Texas oil field and there is good cause for the rejoicing among the oil men who are remaining in the city over the holidays and the wires have been burdened with carrying the good news to those who have returned to the East to spend the Christmas tide

It is announced that Reed, Lowe and Lawson have started drilling in the Jennings Triangle on Section 11 close to the Denver tracks near Electra

Flannagan and Russell are getting ready to start drilling at once on a location on the north half of section 10 of the Fisher Land

The rig is already on the ground and drilling will be started in a few days. J. P. Fannagan arrived today from Sapulpa. Mr. Russell is also here

NEW YORK SUN HAS NEW OWNER

LAFFAN'S WIDOW SELLS CONTROL OF GREAT PAPER TO WILLIAM C. REICK.

$2,500,000 WAS SUM PAID

The Sun Is Most Distinctive Paper In America—A "Sun Story" Always Recognized.

By United Press.

New York, Dec 16.—The New York Sun, one of the best newspapers in America, tomorrow morning will formally announce its controlling interest has been purchased by Wm. C. Reick from Mrs W. M. Laffan, who inherited the property from her husband. The purchase price is kept secret, but it is said to be in the neighborhood of $2,500,000

Wm C. Reick in about fifteen years service on the New York Herald was advanced to the presidency of the company from which he resigned in 1907 to take a minority interest in the New York Times, the control of which is held by Adolph S. Ochs. Later with the Ochs Brothers he acquired the Public Ledger of Philadelphia

With the announcement of the sale of the Sun, it is believed the newspaper will be moved further up town from the little brick building on Park Row that once was Tammany Hall and which the Sun has occupied for many years

Ever since the Sun was established as a penny paper, back in 1833, it has stood for a certain distinctive kind of journalism, but that was particularly true after it passed into the hands of Chas. A. Danna in 1868. It was the great Dana who moulded the Sun, who gave it that unique, original flavor which has survived his death, who made it distinctive in style and literary make-up, gave it new methods of handling copy, made it, in fact, a newspaper that Joseph Pulitzer declared appealed to the "newspaper profession."

The "Sun story" has become famous all over the country. No person has ever been able to define what constitutes a "Sun" story, but it is one that can be recognized from afar. It has been said that the Sun office is more of a club than a newspaper office Every inch of space in the office is occupied and partly because of this, and partly because of the democracy that has always animated the Sun methods the entire staff sits in a single room, reporters and managing editor separated only by a few feet with no rail intervening. That was the way they did things on the old Sun and the Sun has always held that it was good enough for a modern newspaper.

Charles A. Dafina, who controlled the Sun from 1868 until his death ranked with the great American editors, but his methods are entirely distinct from all the others. Greeley would never have college men around. Danna's staff was made up of college men Even today 75 per cent of the Sun's staff is made up of college graduates

REP. SULZER IS STANDING FIRM

HOPES SENATE WILL PASS RESOLUTION ABROGATING RUSSIAN TREATY WITHOUT AMENDMENT.

RUSSIA IS SENSITIVE

Sulzer Regards This As Good Sign and Declares United States Will Succeed in Purpose.

By United Press.

Washington, D. C., Dec 16.—Asserting that Russia cannot afford to sulk and be isolated, Representative Sulzer, Republican of New York, chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, in a statement tonight expressed the hope that his resolution abrogating the treaty of 1832 with Russia would pass the Senate unchanged.

"I hope the Senate will pass the resolution without amendment and with the same unanimity the House gave," said Mr. Sulzer. "That is the only thing that can now be done, and it will be official notice to Russia that the people of the United States are in earnest, and are sincere Russia has always doubted this! The enactment into law of the resolution will have a good effect and in my opinion will bring about a new treaty in harmony with the spirit of the times

"Our relations with Russia will always continue friendly and harmonious and a new treaty, up to date, will soon be written. Russia cannot afford to sulk and be isolated. Of course, I don't know what the Russian Ambassador said to the Secretary of State, but I am sure that he did not tell him that Russia would not live up to her treaty obligations with the United States and recognize passports held by American citizens without discrimination.

"I am told that the Russian Ambassador objects to the declaration in my resolution that Russia has violated the treaty. This statement is absolutely true The record is conclusive and I am surprised that the Ambassador objects to the truth Official Russia seems to be getting sensative about the matter at least, and that is certainly a good sign there is nothing offensive about the resolution. I drew the resolution carefully with a desire to say nothing to which Official Russia or any friend or sympathizer with Russia could take objection The resolution is in diplomatic form and follows the precedents heretofore adopted by Congress. Only it is not so drastic as some which have been passed by Congress. It says nothing we do not mean and it means nothing we have not said before."

Sulzer was not at all nervous over the prospect of a serious result, but was inclined to think Russia would accept the resolution as inevitable if it is passed by the Senate. He believed that a new treaty, which will insure fair treatment to Americans of every race of religion will result

IMPROVEMENTS AT PENITENTIARY

GOV. COLQUITT ANNOUNCES PLANS FOR PRISONS AFTER CONFERENCE WITH PRISON BOARD

HIS OWN GOOD RECORD

Governor Tells of Wonderful Changes In Prison Management Since He Became Executive.

By United Press.

Austin, Texas, Dec 16.—In an authorized statement this afternoon the Governor officially announced that as a result of his recent conference with the prison commission, it was decided to behabilate the blacksmith shop and repair shop, cabinet shop and furniture shop and machine shop and also install new machinery and operate the machine shop at the Rusk prison, which will give employment to as many men as were employed in these industries before the Huntsville fire

"We estimate that the machinery to start these industries in motion," says the Governor, "can be purchased at a cost of about $36,000, that the lumber and other materials necessary to equip the buildings at Huntsville, recently destroyed by fire, by tearing them down to the first roof, and rehabitating them, will cost $7,000. We can purchase the machinery and the materials with which to accomplish this on the credit of the penitentiary system, and this we have determined to do, and pay for the same out of the crops produced next year on the convict farms, and out of the earnings which we hope to make from the penitentiary system generally."

Continuing the Governor says that the records of the past showed that these industries at Huntsville and Rusk have never paid the cost of maintenance until recently, but that since the present administration took charge, modern machinery was purchased and also a stock of supplies and now these industries at the time of the fire were being operated at a profit to the State

"Notwithstanding the misfortune resulting from the fire, and the heavy loss due to the freeze of cane on the convict farms, I have no doubt whatever but that we will enter upon the new year in as good financial condition as we found the penitentiary system when it was turned over to the present administration.

"With the beginning of 1912 tenshare farm contracts and one contract for convict labor at a stipulated price per month, will terminate and none of them have been or will be renewed. These contracts were in force at the time the present administration took charge. The share farm contracts almost without exception have shown a loss to the State There will remain on the first of the year 1912, one small force under contract for stipulated wages, and there will remain three share farm contracts in force, all of which were in effect under a two-year contract at the time this administration took charge of the penitentiary system. These contracts involve only about 385 men After the first day of January all of the 3500 prison population will be worked on state account, excepting the 385 men referred to above"

In conclusion, the Governor says "It may be added in this connection that we have spent about $200,000 in improvements made necessary by the requirements of the new prison laws In addition to this we have had to purchase large number of mules and farm machinery with which to work the state farms The convicts are better housed, better fed, better controlled and better treated than ever before in the history of the system"

Liquor Dealers May Get Refund

By United Press

Austin, Texas Dec 16—Liquor dealers who have been unable to get from the State the refund of the unearned portion of their licenses because the Comptroller found an error in the appropriation of $10,000 made for that purpose by the last legislature and would not issue the warrants, may get their refund It was found this afternoon that the section of the law of 1907 sought to be amended by the last legislature has no bearing whatever on the question of the refund, that in so far as that section is concerned it is the same as originally

SHOW GIRLS WILL SUE FOR DAMAGES

By United Press

New York, Dec 16—That the acquittal of Lillian Graham and Ethel Conrad for the shooting of W E D Stokes will not end the celebrated case was the positive assertion tonight of Attorney Robert M Moore, counsel for Miss Conrad, who declares that both girls will sue the multi millionaire for immense sums

Miss Conrad, it is declared, will demand $250,000 for alleged malicious prosecution and false arrest

Miss Graham has not decided what sum she will demand

"I contend that those young women have splendid claims against Stokes," declared Moore. "Stokes made a sensational charge against them to protect himself from scandal, and he must pay for it He charged that they attempted to blackmail him of $25,000. That was proven untrue to the jury's satisfaction. I have told both the young woman they would be foolish to let the old villian get away with this conspiracy against them"

Assistant District Attorney Barkner, who prosecuted the girls, said today he was greatly disappointed with the verdict.

LITTLE COTTON SHIPPED TO NEW ORLEANS

By United Press

Austin, Dec 16—The Railroad Commission was greatly surprised this afternoon at the report submitted by the Texas and Pacific railway of the amount of cotton shipped from Texas points on its line to New Orleans, the number for two years ending Oct. 31, 1911, being only 670 bales. The commission believes there is some error in the report as it had been generally believed that more cotton than that moved to New Orleans from that road The commission will ask for a verification of the report as several other roads that reported, showed considerably more cotton shipped comparatively to New Orleans

SAUCE FOR GOOSE; SAUCE FOR GANDER

GOVERNOR REFUSED TO APPROVE DEFICIENCY APPROPRIATION THEN, COMPTROLLER REFUSES WARRANT NOW.

IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL

Lane Intimates He Will Hold Up Deficiency for A. and M. College Approved by Governor.

By United Press

Austin Texas, Dec 16—"If this course can be pursued in this instance, then the Governor, Comptroller, and State Treasurer could, without the consent or authority of the legislature withdraw a million dollars from the treasury, if it were available, and this presents such a serious question that I am inclined to think that such a procedure is not contemplated by law," declares Comptroller Lane in an authorized interview this afternoon concerning the application made to him by the board of managers of the A. & M. College for the issuance of a deficiency warrant for $100,000 to rebuild the mess hall at the college and which application has the approval of the Governor

The Comptroller maintains that this is not merely a request for an ordinary deficiency warrant, but is in fact a request for a deficiency warrant which would authorize the immediate payment of $100,000 out of the public treasury for which there was no appropriation whatever made by the last legislature He points out that the deficiency has never been approved by the Governor or allowed by the Comptroller which was not based upon a specific appropriation further than that he requested the Governor last February to approve a deficiency of $1000 for the payment of sheriff's fees etc, out of a balance of $18,000 remaining unexpended out of an appropriation of $100,000 made by the Thirty First Legislature to pay deficiencies, but the Governor declined on constitutional grounds, and now the Comptroller says, the Governor wants him to issue a warrant for which there is absolutely no constitutional authority

The Comtroller says he recognizes the emergency for the appropriation, but he does not intend to violate his oath of office to relieve a situation even as grave as the present one.

Big Pasture Men Will Farm With Sub Soil Dynamite

(Grandfield Enterprise)

We have read many articles from time to time upon the wonderful results accomplished by the new method of farming with dynamite and now the idea has reached the Big Pasture and its merits will be demonstrated next season in the Grandfield country. Three progressive farmers who are wide-awake and always abreast of the times, have ordered from the Dupont Powder Co., a special brand of sub soiling dynamite as follows H H Parks, 200 pounds, Frank Spekman, 50 pounds and Jake Illing 40 pounds They consider this a sufficient amount to make a test and feel confident this method of soil treatment will do all that is claimed for it.

The idea is to take a two-inch augur and bore holes to a depth of about three feet for every ten feet square of ground insert a half stick of the dynamite and explode the charge. This breaks up the sub soil of hard pan releases plant food and permits the moisture to go down, thereby storing a surplus for dry periods. The crops are also enabled to send down roots to a much greater depth and will not be so easily affected by the drouth By this method many farmers in other States claim to have doubled the productivness of their land The experiments of the above gentlemen will be watched with interest

STUDENTS HOME FOR HOLIDAYS

MANY WICHITA FALLS YOUNG PEOPLE AWAY AT COLLEGE COMING HOME FOR CHRISTMAS.

MERRY TIMES AHEAD

Social Life of City Will Receive Stimulus From Bouyant Spirits of Enthusiastic Collegians.

Christmas is rapidly approaching, and with it will come many pleasures which are not to be enjoyed at any other season of the year. A carefree spirit prevails about Christmas time among young and old alike which is the means of bringing pleasure and happiness to the hearts of many who do not allow themselves enjoyment at any other time during the year.

It would be safe to make the statement that no person or persons in this city, either young or old, married or single, will more thoroughly enjoy the pleasures and privileges of the Christmas holidays than will the boys and girls who for the last several months have been absent from home studying in the different universities and colleges throughout the country.

Most of them will come here with the burden of term examinations lifted from their hearts, while others will temporarily shake aside their feelings of dread and foreboding, and after a small and unpretentious letter bearing the stamp of their college has been received, they too will enter fully into the Christmas spirit with every burden lifted from their minds, and knowing that the college profs, who will then be far away, have no terrors for them, at least during the time they remain at home.

These college students, boys and girls, upon their arrival here will liven things up in great style, and there will be "something doing" all of the time while they remain in the city. There will be parties at night, and hunting fishing, and other outdoor amusements in the day time. The girls will relate reminiscences, and the boys especially the freshmen, will relate tales of narrow escapes and deeds of daring on the grid iron. All these have their place on the conversations heard on the streets.

During next week, nearly all of the college students now absent from their homes will arrive. Some are already here but the most of them are now in the midst of the dreaded term examinations, and are ardently wishing that the time would come for them to take the train bound for Wichita Falls where home and friends are awaiting them.

Those who are already here, or who will arrive in the next few days are Miss Aileen Waggoner, of Polytechnic College in Fort Worth; Merle Waggoner, of Southwestern University at Georgetown; Robert Huff, from Peacock Military School in San Antonio Miss Gertrude Orth, from Kidd-Key College in Sherman; Miss Edna Gaston, from Hardin College, Mexico, Mo. Edison Jalonick, of Washington-Lee University, Lexington, Virginia; Eugene Isley, from Baylor University, at Waco, Texas; Ralph Mathis, of the University of Texas, at Austin; Edith Mathis, of Kidd-Key College, in Sherman; Miss Vivian Mathis, from Denver, Colorado, where she has been studying voice for several months Wayne Somerville, from the University of Texas, at Austin; Wiley Blair, Jr. of Pauling school in New York; Grady Barnett, from the University of Texas; Alphonse Boger, from T. C. U. in Ft Worth; Miss Gladys Trueblood, of the University of Texas, in Austin; Miss Annie Carrigan, from the University of Arkansas, Lafayette, Arkansas; Miss Bess Kell, of St. Mary's Academy in Dallas; Miss Willie May Kell who will return with an A. B. degree from the University of Texas; Miss Bertha May Kemp, from St. Mary's College in Dallas; Miss Katie Stone cipher, of Lenox Hall of Music, St Louis, Mo.; Miss Lillian Avis, of Kidd Key College in Sherman, and Miss Ethel Frieze, also of Kidd-Key College.

Some of those absent from the city will be unable to be here during the holidays from one cause or another and among these are Carter McGregor of Poughkeepsie Business College, in New York; Clarence Barnett, of Leland Stanford College, in California; Bentley Bacon, of Poughkeepsie Business College, in New York; Miss Nellie Jalonick, of Sweet Brier College, in Virginia; Rhea Howard, of Poughkeepsie Business College, in New York; and the Misses Mabelle Clopton, and Orvetta Wyatt, of Lockport, New York Nearly all of the above mentioned boys and girls will spend Christmas either with relatives or college chums, and in this way will be able to forget for a short time the routine of school work

YULETIDE REGALLS FEUDAL DRINKS

MANY VINTAGES AND BREWS IN FAVOR THEN, CANNOT BE FOUND NOW.

DRINKING CUPS UNIQUE

Popular Tankard of the Day Had a Whistle for Summoning Waiters.

London, Eng., Dec. 16.—With Chirstmas comes the conflict on the old question—to drink or not to drink? For 'tis a poor heart that never rejoices; and Christmas is the time above all others when festivity casts a spell over the world.

Most moderns are inclined to be thankful, though, that they are no longer called upon to sit down to the Garantuan feasts their forefathers thought it necessary to place before their guests at Christmas time.

They may now safely accept an invitation to dinner without having to assist in demolishing huge joints of beef, accompanied by peacocks, swans, brawns, and capoons, to say nothing of a fish course in which whole pikes and sturgeons were prominent.

Nor need they feel it necessary to join the other guests under the table at the conclusion of the feast as a result of having added too many "hot and rebellious liquors" to the generous fare. This is a more abstemious age, and many of the heavy and strange dishes are gone which our lusty forebears polished off with such amazing appetite.

But although we have grown out of the gluttonous and bibulous habits of the past, we still retain many of those old customs of the table which have been handed down from the early centuries.

To America belongs the distinction of having invented a greater number of new drinks, with fantastic titles, than any other nation, and the British export Edward Spencer, better known to sportsmen as "Nathaniel Gubbins" also asserts Uncle Sam introduced the bar system into England.

Spencer, by the way, is hard on the habit of drinking between meals "Better, far better," he urges, "was the three-bottle trick of our ancestors than the gin-crawl of today." But his opinion is not shared by a breezy character in a recent novel by Charles Travice, who advances the bold theory that between meals is the best time of all to dring as a man can then give it his sole and undivided attention.

The concern of this story, however, is less with nips, pegs, cocktails and other occasional refreshers than with the drink of the people on ceremonial and festive occasions; and here the Old Country can claim to have put in some very rich and satisfying liquors.

Before the Romans taught them how to brew, the ancient Britons slaked their thrist and wished each other luck in mead, cider or perry, but having once learned the taste of ale, they quickly raised the brewing of John Barleycorn to a fine art, and it became the staple drink of the country. So popular did it become that its aid was invoked whenever it was found necessary to raise funds for public purposes, and the "Church Ales" of a past age were as helpful to the distressful clergy as a modern church bazaar.

The Romans had a great fondness for wine; in fact, the virtues of the juice of the grape were well established as far back as the days of Noah, who drank not wisely but too well of the product of his own vineyards.

The origin of winemaking is also claimed by the Persians, whose King, Jemsheed, stored a quantity of grapes in his cellar for future use They fermented and becoming very cold, were believed to be poisonous, and were so labeled.

A lady of the harem, who desired to commit suicide, took freely of the juice and became very drunk. After a lengthened sleep, however, she awoke perfectly well, and was so pleased with her experiment that she promptly finished the rest of the "poison."

Our sparkling wines we owe to the blind monk, Dom Perignon, cellarer to the Abbey of Hautvilliers. His blindness increased the delicacy of his palate, and as the result of his experience, he succeeded in producing the sparkling wine which has added so much to the gayety of nations.

Wine was first drunk out of the glazer bowl, made of light maplewood, highly polished, and afterwards out of a buglehorn. Silver bowls were next introduced, and about the time when Queen Elizabeth's sun was setting, vessels made of Venetian glass first made their appearance at State banquets.

Beer was usually carried from the cellar to the table, in the Eighteenth Century, in large leathern tankards, called "Blackjacks," lined with silver or porvided with a silver rim. The "Peg Tankard" was the invention of St. Dunstan Abbot of Glastonbury, who may be considered to have been the first temperance reformer in England.

Being shocked at the frequent and sanguinary quarrels of his Saxon flock over their Wassail bowls, he invented a tankard divided into equal spaces by eight pegs, one above another, each division being a legal draught, beyond which it was made a penal offense for a man to drink. It was from the use of this tankard that the expression arose "a peg too low."

The whistle tankard had a whistle attached to the brim, so that the drinker could blow it when he desired the vessel to be refilled. Hence the saying, "if you want more, you must whistle for it." In some cases the whistle was ingeniously contrived at the bottom of the tankard, so that it sounded itself when the vessel was emptied.

The bellshaped drinking glasses of the Sixteenth Century were intended to be emptied at one draught, and would only stand in the reversed position. It is from these vessels we have the modern word, "tumbler." They were usually provided with dice or a little bell, which served a similar purpose to the whistle on the tankard.

TO SPREAD FAME OF "BELLE OF WICHITA"

As an evidence of the large amount of business which is transacted by the Wichita Falls Mill & Elevator Company, more than a wagon load of mail was taken to the postoffice Friday afternoon, and delivered into the case of Uncle Sam's men. The wagon used was a large float employed at the mill in delivering flour about the city, and has a capacity of several tons.

However, the sending of so large amount of mail is not a daily occurrance at the Mill & Elevator Company, and the cause of it yesterday was the fact that Christmas is drawing near, and the management of the company thought this a good time to show their customers that their patronage is appreciated, and that they have not forgotten them. With this end in view, they mailed out yesterday afternoon to their out-of-town customers, over sixteen hundred new calendars of a very beautiful design.

Not only did they remember their out-of-town customers, but their home customers as well. They have employed two boys from the graduating class at the high school building whose business it will be for the next several days to deliver one of these handsome calendars into the home of every family in this city that uses flour manufactured by the mill.

These boys, as they go over town, will call at every house, and will inquire whether or not the occupants are users of Wichita Mall & Elevator flour, and in case the answers is no, the boys will take down the name of that family and a complete list of such names will be returned to the office for future reference.

It is planned by the management of the mill to place a small sample sack of flour in the home of every person in this city who is not a user of their flour and sample sacks will be placed in every grocery store in town for distribution to people whose names appear on the mill's list of non-users of their product. In this way Wichita Falls manufactured flour is expected to speak for itself, and those who do not now use it are invited to secure one of the sample sacks and try it for themselves.

The calendars which were sent to out-of-town customers will some of them travel for a distance of many miles, as the mill has been exporting flour to Porto Rico, Cuba, Jamacia, England and points on the continent for many months. Carload shipments of flour to these points are not at all uncommon.

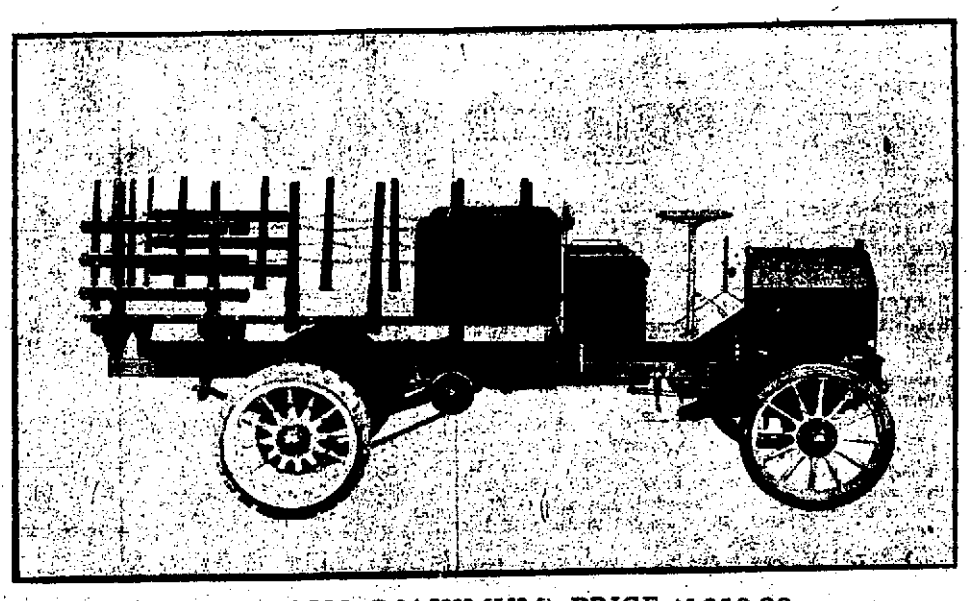
STEWART'S INJURIES ARE VERY SERIOUS

Rev. R. R Hamlin has received word from Mrs. Frankli Stewart, whose son was recently injurded in a boiler explosion in Keokuk, Iowa, and upon hearing the news, immediately left for that place to be at his bedside, the Young Stewart is in a very bad condition, and that he has but a slight chance of recovery.

Arthur Stewart is well known here, where he was formerly employed as the engineer on a steam shovel, and his home was in this city. While on duty a few days ago, the boiler to his steam shovel exploded breaking one leg, putting out one eye, and tearing a large hole in his scalp from one eye brow to the crown of his head. He is not expected to live, although he has a slight chance for recovery.

Mr. Paul Fowler, an engineer of this city, and his personal friend, is also at his beside.

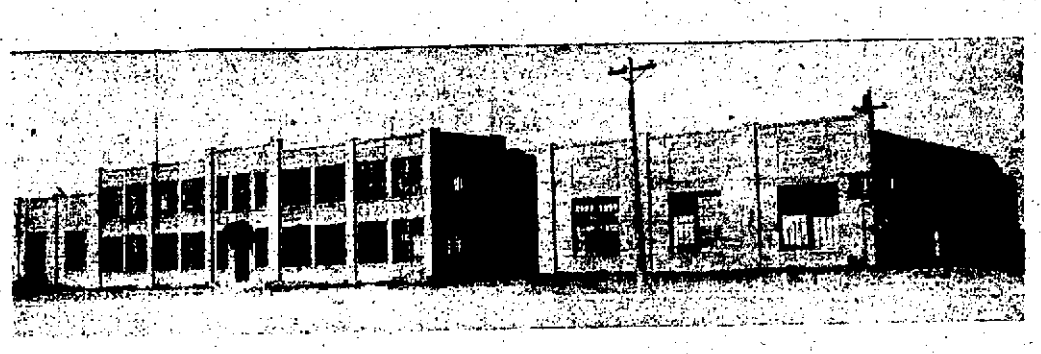
"WICHITA" — "WICHITA"



TWO TON (MAXIMUM) PRICE $1850.00

MR. BUSINESS MAN:—

Did you know that it is the easiest matter in the world to stop those big feed bills you are paying for all those horses you are using? Do you know that one "WICHITA" TRUCK will easily replace four horses and one man? Did you know that the WICHITA MOTOR COMPANY are now making deliveries of the best motor trucks in this country? Do you want to keep abreast with the times? If you don't your competitors will to your loss and their gain. Do you know that the largest and best equipped factory for the manufacture of trucks and delivery wagons west of the Mississippi river, is located in Wichita Falls, Texas? Did you know that this Company is equipped to turn out as many as three to five finished trucks in twenty-four hours?



Main factory building of Wichita Falls Motor Company.

The "Wichita" Trucks and deliveries are the product of years of study and experiment of the designers, and embody all the proven good qualities of commercial car manufacture. But we go still farther and in one "fell stroke" as it were entirely and forever relegate to the past the one great drawback heretofore encountered by the users of commercial automobiles. By our patented control (one and on our cars only) we do away with all the former complications in the control of such a car. Instead of some six to eight levers, pedals etc., used by all other makes of such cars; the proper handling and operation of which constituted an almost impregnable handicap to employers (on account of having to employ experienced drivers to operate them). Our cars are equipped with the McKeiarnan unit control. By the use of this device any inexperienced man or boy can learn to successfully operate our cars in one hours time. This unite control automatically controls spark, throttle, gears and clutch and is manipulated from the top of steering wheel. Other good features include a four cylinder enbloc motor, three fans (one in rear of radiator, one in fly wheel and one in the clutch); three speed forward and reverse sliding gear transmission, cone clutch, Thermo Syphon cooling system, Bosch Magneto, high speed gear, ratio (one ton) seven to one (two ton) nine to one, all parts oiled by pump from pump in bottom of crank case. Large two bearing crank shaft, pressed steel frames, heavy artillery wheels. Double chain drive to rear wheels. Extra large solid tires, two sets of brakes, one on jack shaft and one on rear wheels. Unit drop forged axles. Weight carried on top of springs permiting free oscillation (no shackles), worm and sector steering gear, besides many other improvements in the finer details, such as swinging starting crank, etc., coupled with all other advantages is one that to the users is of the most vital importance and that is the price.

Our one ton (maximum) with panel top finely finished with your name and occupation in gold leaf letters is only $1575.00 F. O. B., Wichita Falls. The two ton (maximum) with the very best hard wood heavily ironed stake body is only $1850.00 F. O. B. Wichita Falls. However we are prepared to furnish any style or shaped body that may be required, we know that these trucks are the very best that money and fine equipment can turn out and therefore guarantee each car sold for the term of one year. All parts of this car are made interchangeable and nearly all, including the engine, made in our home plant, where we are prepared to furnish repairs for any part within twenty-four hours time. It is no longer a question as to which is the cheapest principle, horse drawn or motor trucks---That is settled beyond a doubt. All that is left for you to determine is where can I get the best truck for a given amount of money to suit my purpose? The answer is from,

FROM SANTA CLAUS.

My dear, dear Children, one and all.
I got your letters, great and small;
I've read each one with special care,
And thank you for the love they bear.
I have an airship, fine and new,
And it is filled with things for you.
I've eleventy-million dolls,
Fixed up fine in their folderols;
And buggies you should see the pile,
All of them in the latest style.
There has been ten thousand wishes
For "a little set of dishes;"
And I have them--ev—er—y one;
Don't that mean just lots of fun?
Than I have stacks, and stacks, and stacks
Of "toot-toot' rtains that run on tracks.
There's autos, airships, guns and balls,
Everything for which a boy calls.
In addition to all of this
I've also something I hope you'll miss,
I have to take along with me
Something you always dread to see:
'Tis a bundle of thorny sticks
For smart children who play tricks,
And for those who will not believe
I bring the things which they receive;
For those who slip around and peep
On Christmas eve when they should sleep.
I hope there won't be any calls
For these sticks in Wichita Falls.
But if there are—I'll leave some sure,
No foolishness will I endure.
I love you every one' tis true,
And that is why I'm warning you.
I want to fill your stockings up
From my great, golden loving cup.
Its full of candy nuts and fruit,
With chewing-gum thrown in to boot.
I'll tie your socks with strings of corn,
That's popped right fresh for Christmas morn.
So be good girls, and be good boys,
For I am coming with your toys.
Hooray! Hurrah! Hooray! Hurrah!
For every child in Wichita,
Put out your lights—turn off the gas,
And wonderful things shall come to pass.
I am yours faithfully--because
I am your own, old—SANTA CLAUS.

"What is the Matter With American Women?" Answer "American Men"

Kansas City Star.

What is the matter with the American woman? Too much liberty, say some soul-physicians. Too much money says others. Suffragists diagnose the trouble as lack of the ballot; anti-suffragists declare it to be the threatening "yellow peril" of women's votes.

The latest physician to be called into consultation over this invalid, in spite of herself, is Mrs. Flora McDonald Thompson, who has specialized for years as a writer on social conditions affecting American women, and who is leader in feminine affairs in Connecticut.

For when you ask Mrs. Thompson what is the matter with the American woman your question echoes about your head as if you had asked it in the Cave of the Winds.

"What is the matter with the American woman?" she quickly repeats and as promptly answers, "The American man.

"More particularly it is the materialism of the American man.

"That is manifest in the moral order by neglect of religion and consequent contempt of woman in the exercise of those functions which the Christian religion make unavoidable for her—family and maternal functions. It is manifest in the political order by Socialism, which conspicuously in municipal governments places the state in competition with the woman in the performance of home duties and in the rearing of the child.

"Nowadays scarcely anybody will believe that he is alive, free or happy unless there is an official commission, backed by statistics, to assure him of the fact.

"If American babes in arms, could speak they would today, in the name of democracy, refuse their mother's milk until a duly appointed commission of public hygiene had called a meeting, made an investigation, prepared statistics, read papers, and fully and finally by law prescribed the milk in the interests of the whole people.

"Misapplication of the majority rule has dethroned the American mother in the nursey. Practically her whole mission toward the family has been usurped by the State or some State re-enforced form of collectivism, until now she public playgrounds and summer camps.

"Now the ill go to hospitals, the aged go to institutions. Americans are not a long-lived people. Yet in New York City there are approximately fifteen thousand in public and private institutions for the aged. Empty handed, hungry hearted in empty homes, the woman is left idle and alone. Even her one eternally indispensable function is arranged in the name of progression, to diminish her occupation in the home, to belittle her essential importance in the family. Women nowadays—the poorer ones from necessity, the wealthier ones from choice—go to hospitals to have their children brought into the world."

505 WICH. ALL. 505

Wichita Falls, Texas, Dec. 17th, 1911.

The Wichita County farmer who drove to town the other day, riding a split log drag, has set an example which if followed, will result in a remarkable change in the character of the roads in this section. Get a split log drag and help make better roads

The heart action to the human soul is about the same thing as a well written and neatly printed and circulated advertisement is to the live wide-awake, energetic, enterprising and pushing business man The only advertising that does not bring the desired results are those that are written, printed and circulated with the express purpose of deception The honest, straightforward advertiser rarely ever fails to get returns that are satisfactory. That is the kind of advertisers the Times wants to deal with

This issue of the Times will be distributed over a territory several hundred miles north in Oklahoma, a greater distance northwest in Texas and right into Dallas and Fort Worth before or soon after breakfast this morning. We have tried to make the paper bright and interesting—although we know there is much room for improvement—and there is just about enough of it to be read before the Sunday school hour—and right here we will say that the Sunday school lesson for the day can be found in the paper Read the paper and then go to Sunday school, but go to Sunday school whether you read the paper or not.

The fellow whose religion does not teach him to embrace opportunities, within his reach to perform good deeds, isn't of the right brand, and he needs a working over. While there will be thousands of children made happy on Christmas morn, there will be hundreds who will be made unhappy because of their discomfiture and disappointment at seeing that the more fortunate children have been well remembered and provided for, and are playing with their toys, while they can do nothing but stand around and look miserable. The Times would like to see a movement that would result in raising sufficient funds to place in the tabernacle the biggest Christmas tree that can be obtained, and have it lighted with candles and loaded with presents for those whom Santa Claus is not likely to find this Christmas.

Precinct No 1 in Grayson county, in which Sherman is located, has just voted a $400,000 good roads bond issue. By far the greater portion of the taxes that will be levied to pay principal and interest on these bonds will be from property in the city of Sherman, and at least 75 per cent of the road improvement will be made in that part of the precinct outside the city limits Looking at it thi way it would seem that the property holders outside the city limits would have favored the issuance of good road bonds, considering the fact that 75 per cent of the improvements were to be made by the expenditure of money collected as a tax from city property, but they did not view it in that light, and as strange as it may seem, a majority of the property holders outside the city voted against the proposition, while a majority of them in the city favored it, and by their votes made it possible to issue the bonds. Good roads pay for themselves in several different ways. This fact has been most thoroughly demonstrated They enhance property values, they bring churches and schools nearer to the home, and they bring the farm closer to the market by reason that one can travel with much more comfort, make better time and pull a heavier load over a good road than it is possible over a bad one. On this point it occurs to the Times that the owner of farm property who votes against a proposition to build and maintain in a first-class condition the public high-ways is standing in his own light.

The Times is issued this morning for the first time as a Sunday morning paper, and from this time on will be issued Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday on week days, skipping Saturday to take up the Sunday morning edition The encouragement the venture has thus far received at the hands of business men and advertisers is a further evidence that they meant what they said when a great majority of them had as individuals expressed the hope that the Times could see its way clear to publish a Sunday morning edition After due consideration of the matter the Times has decided that in order to meet the additional expense of publishing a Sunday morning paper, it would be absolutely necessary to increase slightly its advertising rates, and so far all advertisers whom our advertising solicitor has had time to call upon, have readily agreed to meet the increase One reason for having to increase the advertising rate is the large amount of extra telegraph news carried by the Sunday morning paper, which in addition to the unexcelled Associated Press which furnishes the Times with its afternoon report, is taking the United Press Association Saturday night report which comes to the Times over a leased wire, and this is very expensive. Another reason for having to advance the advertising rate is that night work costs more than day work, and in the mechanical department all over eight hours work is paid for at the rate of time and one-half. And still another reason for the advance in rates is that it is better for the advertiser in that a greater number of papers are printed, circulated and read. The rates were made as low as it was possible to make them, and even after the raise, they are still lower than the rates charged for advertising space by papers published in cities of similar size—like that of Amarillo, Abilene, Paris, Denison, Sherman, Hillsboro, Brownwood, and other thriving and enterprising papers published in towns that are growing and are thrifty. So far as the Times was concerned it would have much preferred to continue to publish only on afternoons of week-days, as six days work in one week is all that should be required of any man, but the public generally, seemed to think differently, and more to gratify their wishes than our own, the Times has made the change, and trusts that it will be appreciated

They are Great

It has been demonstrated clearly enough that the larger the cotton crop yield is, the less price it brings, and the rule of supply and demand is yet the greatest factor in setting the price of the product The census Bureau places the 1911 cotton crop at 14,770,000 bales The crop of 1904, which up to this year was the record crop, amounted to 13,438,012 bales It makes not a particle of difference it seems how much or how little is raised, except that there is just as much money to be realized from a 10,000,000 bale crop and perhaps a little more, than a 15,000,000 can be sold for. Neither does it make any difference as to what per cent of the people are going scantily clad They wear no more clothes when the price of cotton is 9c and 10c per pound than they do when it sells from 13c to 15c. Therefore one is forced to the conclusion that overproduction has had much more to do with the lowering of the price of cotton than we have been willing heretofore to admit. The solution of the question is a reduction in cotton acreage and diversified farming When it clearly to be seen that a farmer can cultivate and sell 4 acres of cotton for much less than he can 15 acres, and sell it for more actual money than he could possibly dispose of the product from 15 acres of cotton, it would seem that no further argument would be necessary to convince him that he had best raise less cotton and more of other things to which the soil is adapted.

The two show girls, Ethel Conrad and Lillian Graham, who, on June 8th of this year attempted to kill W E. D. Stokes in a New York apartment house, were acquitted yesterday by a jury of twelve men. From the evidence it appears that while the two girls were not so bad, or perhaps the better term might be to say fast, they were far from slow and picked for their victim a sporty old millionaire, who charges they attempted to extort money from him. Their defense was that Stokes had made improper proposals, and they summoned him to their room with the intention of forcing him to sign certain papers, and on his refusal to do this, the shooting took place, one of the five or six bullet fired by the girls finding lodgment in one of Stokes' legs The trial of the girls has attracted Nation-wide interest, and has resulted as most every one had expected They are now in a better position than before to demand and get a raise in their salaries as vaudeville girls, and their reputation or character has not suffered to any great extent. There will be others who will follow their example, and they will experience little or no trouble in finding men who have more money than brains on whom to work their game If, as Stokes charged, they attempted to extort money from him and failed in that, they were smart enough to see that the next best thing to money to them was notoriety, and this they got, and it will answer the same purpose

IS THERE A SANTA CLAUS?

New York Sun.

We take pleasure in answering at once and thus prominently the communication below, expressing at the same time our great gratification that its faithful author is numbered among the friends of The Sun

"Dear Editor—I am eight years old Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus Papa says 'If you see it in The Sun it's so Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus? Virginia O'Hanlon, 115 West Ninety-fifth street."

Virginia, your little friends are wrong They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age They do not believe except they see They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their minds All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy Alas! How dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus? It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias There would be no child like faith then, no poetry no romance to make tolerable this existence We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished

Not believe in Santa Claus? You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas eve to catch Santa Claus but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not but that's no proof that they are not there Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world

You may tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived could tear apart Only faith, fancy poetry, love, romance can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernatural beauty and glory beyond Is it real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

No Santa Claus! Thank God! He lives and He lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia—nay, ten times ten thousand years from now—He will continue to make glad the heart of childhood

ANOTHER KILLING IN HOUSTON SHOPS

Thomas Lyons Who Did Not Go Out With Strikers Shot Down Saturday.

Houston, Dec. 16.—Thomas C. Lyons, aged 60, a carpenter in the employ of the Southern Pacific shops, was shot and killed this morning in an enclosure just without the walls. A rifle bullet from an unknown slayer entered his temple. Lyons did not go out with the strikers.

Lyons had taken but little part in the strike agitation. Federal guards and others about the enclosure failed to ascertain the direction from whence the shot came. A rigid investigation is being made.

Mysterious Features of Shooting.

Houston, Dec. 16.—The assassination of Thos. Lyons in the yards of the Southern Pacific railway this morning possesses many features that are puzzling to the police. Harriman line strikers bore him no enmity and when they went out Oct. 1, owing to his years, and length of service, he was told to stay by his post and that his standing with the unions would not be affected. He was not regarded as a strike or enemy of the strikers in any sense. Again, the shot that killed him entered the top of his right temple, ranged downward several inches and came out at the left ear. There are no houses adjacent to the roundhouse which would afford the proper angle for the shot. Again, the terrific course plowed by it in his head indicates that the shot was fired from close range and this has led to the assertion by many that the man who held the gun was within the round house enclosure. The killing occurred between the wall of the roundhouse and the fence that encloses it. He was on his knees cutting meat for pet cats when shot. Men standing within a few feet of Lyons say they can't swear they heard the shot and no one in that locality saw any smoke.

Theories held by officers differ Some say that the shot was intended simply to warn the strike breakers not to leave the roundhouse while others assert the investigation thus far convinces them that it was accidental and still others think a personal enemy of Lyons did the deed, but he was not known to have any enemies Twelve hours of close investigation has shed no light on the affair.

This is the third killing since the strike began and one result has been to again render the situation somewhat acute.

President Fay of the Harriman lines in Texas and Louisiana tonight made public statement in which he bitterly attacks the local officers for what he terms the non-enforcement of the law in connection with the strike. The latter, however, assert that, he at the very inception of the trouble and before the slightest violence had resulted, had resorted to the federal court, and that deputy marshals are now in charge of the situation, no less than ten being on a strike only at present. They assert further that in the case of the two preceding killings investigations have shown that company guards did the fatal shooting and, further that they are maintaining order. They also assert they are doing all in their power to ferret out theassassin of Lyons, but are unwilling as yet to charge that he is a striker.

GRAIN MARKET QUIET SATURDAY

FAVORABLE WEATHER CONDITIONS FOR HARVEST IN ARGENTINE—DOMESTIC RECEIPTS SMALL.

LITTLE CHANGE IN CORN

Reports of Snow Over Corn Belt Interfering With Movement Caused Slight Drop—Other Grains.

By United Press.

Chicago, Dec. 16 All grain markets were quiet, with but little fluctuation in values. Wheat opened slightly lower on the strength of cable reports from Argentine that weather conditions were perfect for reaping and harvesting the crops. Small domestic receipts at Northwestern markets had a like effect. But beyond these two items of interest the wheat market had nothing to speculate on, and as a result prices ruled firm and steady. May closed up 1-4; July unchanged.

Snow reported over practically the entire corn belt suggested smaller movement of that grain to the market and caused a slight drop in prices at the opening Prices hardened a little later. May closed up 1-8; July unchanged.

It was an unusually quiet day in the stock market. Demand was light and the offerings small, all the while prices changed they did not vary more than 1-4 during the entire session. May closed unchanged; July up 1-8.

A big increase in local tickets during the first half of the month caused a feeling of weakness in porvisions. Prices at the close were not materially different from those at the opening.

New York Futures.

By United Press.

New York, Dec. 16—Except the current position which was up two points from the final price yesterday to 9.19 and July unchanged at 9.15. Cotton futures opened today with a slight touch of weakness. January was down four points to 8.75; March was off 2 points to 8 90; and May at 9.02, showed a decline of .3 points Gains of 1 to 2 points resulted from the trading of the first quarter of an hour. The close was barely steady, 2 to 7 points net higher.

THE NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

Stocks Develop Unexpected Activity and Strength and Leading Industrials Advance.

By United Press.

New York, Dec. 16.—Financial America, in its issue of Monday will say. "The stock market developed unexpected acitvity and strength last week as indicated by the fact that the leading industrial and railroads made advances ranging from four to six points.

The report of the railroad securities market was an important factor on the bull side, and so was the action of the commerce court in making permanent the temporary injunction against the decreased rates ordered by the inter-state commerce commission to take effect on Nov. 15 last. Of equal importance was the action of the United States Steel Corporation in advancing rates on several classes of finished steel product and the news of the increased demand in the steel trade that brought the volume of business in sight up to the highest amount that has been recorded for the last two years.

Copper trade conditions continue to show marked improvement with sales of copper metal during the week at close 14 cents per pound, compared with sales at under 11 cents only two months ago. Little attention was paid either to the various discussion since Congress or to the prominence seeking of many available candidates for the presidential contest next year.

The money situation in the past two weeks has radically changed and it might be said that fears of stringent money at the end of the year have been eliminated by the strong position in which the associated banks of this city have placed themselves

Officer Gets Him Nearly to Norfolk Va., When Prisoner Jumped from Rapidly Moving Train.

Alex Simmonds, an Electra officer, returned yesterday afternoon from a trip to Norfork, Virginia, for which place he recently left with a deserter from the army, Lawrence Aber, by name. Simmonds, expected to turn Aber over to the government officials in Norfork, after which he expected to receive a reward of fifty dollars.

Aber, however, in spite of the fact that he gave himself up, and declared that he was tired of dodging the officers, had other notions in his head. When the train had arrived at a point about one hundred miles from their destination, Aber, said that he wished to go to the back of the car for a short time, and requested the officer to remove his hand cuffs so that he would not appear conspicious

As Aber had cultivated the good will of Simmonds during the trip and had seemed to be a most model prisoner, Simmonds consented, but immediately changed his mind However Aber refused to submit to being handcuffed again, and led the office a chase thorugh the whole train At last when the train was rounding a curve and had slowed up a trifle, Aber leaped from a car window and disappeared in the darkness and since that time has been seen no more

Simmonds returned yesterday at

Could Greer County Recover

By United Press.

Austin, Texas, Dec. 16—An unusual suit was filed today in the district court by J B Pumphrey and J M Kuckenteall of Williamson county against the State of Texas It is to recover the sum of $4,560 paid over 25 years ago as rental for the lease of 76,000 acres of land in Greer county Plaintiffs alleged that in 1885 they leased in good faith from what was then known as the state land board, this land for a period of several years at a rental of six cents per acre That the State claimed jurisdiction over this land as being part of Greer county, but when in fact the State had no claim or jurisdiction to the land and that the land belonged to the territory of Oklahoma. It is shown that the Thirty Second Legislature made an appropriation of $6,000 for the purpose of making refunds of land erroneously.

BATTLE OF WORDS OVER SHATTERED HULK OF THE MAINE

By United Press

Washington, D C, Dec 16—A battle of words over the shattered hulk of the Maine between Minority Leader James Mann (Republican, of Illinois), and Representative Sisson (Democrat of Mississipi), disturbed the debate on the urgetn deficiency bill in the House late today Sisson, almost white with rage and chagrin, hurled such hot words at Mann that he almost choked

A $300,000 provision for the removal of the wreckage of the Maine from Havana harbor was under consideration It was understood that the war department officials expressed the purpose to bulkhead the hulk and sink it at sea Sisson offered an amendment that the wreckage be brought up salvaged and held in the form of relics to partially reimburse the government for its expense

"It is strange," said Mann, "that the gentleman does not include a provision to sell the bones of the dead sailors who gave up their lives, in order that the government may be reimbursed"

Sisson jumped to his feet and shouted hoarsely at Mann "I may be guilty of a great many indiscertions but I trust I shall never be as brutal as the gentelman from Illinois The remark is absolutely gratitious It emanaates evidently from a desire to wound He should not submit a member to that sort of insinuation and that sort of scar I have never desired to resent an insult I have always been ready to take care of myself but the rules of the House will not permit me to do and say those things that I desire to do

Sisson was interrupted with a storm of applause from the Democratic side but he was in too much earnest to heed and he shouted If the gentleman from Illinois has any desire to cast any reflection upon me or my motives then I want to say that there are times for such action I do not think it is becoming in the gentleman to make this sort of insinuation when he is protected by the rules of the House

Sisson sat down with the Democratic side shouting approval Mann rising in his place nervously disclaimed any need for the protecting of the rules Sisson's amendment was defeated and the matter apparently closed

Story of The Clansman

The story of Thomas Dixon's celebrated drama, "The Clansman," a revival of which will appear in this city on Saturday, December 23, matinee and night at the Wichita Theatre is well known to all theatre-goers. However, in view of the coming engagement of the play, it may be well to mention it.

"The Clansman" is briefly the story of how the descendants of the Scottish clans, living in the South Carolina hill country, rose up in the year of 1867 and threw off the carpetbagger yoke. Their agency in effecting this result was the celebrated Ku Klux Klan The hero of the play, Ben Cameron, is a leader of the Klan His sweetheart, Elsie Stoneman, is the daughter of an Abolitionist, the organizer of the hated Union League Here is the interplay of love and hate of passion and circumstance, in which the dramatist delights

Elsie's father puts forth every effort to enforce negro domination, and Ben as stoutly resists. The latter is arrested and clapped in jail by the scalawag white Governor of the State, who is egged on by the mulatto Lieutenant-Governor, Silas Lynch A Federal Court martial sentences Ben to death. Elsie begs the Lieutenant-Governor to save him. The latter says he will if Elsie will marry him (the mulatto). Elsie faints at the knocking proposal Stoneman enters and is maddened on learning what his trusted protege Lynch has done. He has encouraged Lynch about social equality and indeed has told him to go ahead and marry a white woman; but when he learns Lynch wants his own daughter, that is another story and his rage and disgust are beyond bounds.

Yet Stoneman and his daughter are helpless in the hands of the mulatto. It is the Ku Klux Klan who, headed by the rescued Ben, surround the house, make Lynch a prisoner and free the old man and his daughter. Stoneman at last sees his gigantic mistake in trying to rule the country by carpetbaggers and negroes and in instilling false ideas of social and political equality. He announces that he will make yet another trip to Washington to induce the authorities there to withdraw the Federal troops and allow the Southern people to manage their affairs in their own way Ben and Elsie are united. A fairer day begins for that portion of the stricken South, thanks to the high purpose, steadfast courage and heroic achievements of the Ku Klux Klan, "an invisible Empire which within a few months overspread a territory larger than modern Europe, snatched power out of defeat and death and tore the fruits of victory from twenty million conquerors

SELF STYLED DESERTER MADE HIS ESCAPE

Officer Gets Him Nearly to Norfolk Va., When Prisoner Jumped from Rapidly Moving Train.

Alex Simmonds, an Electra officer, returned yesterday afternoon from a trip to Norfork, Virginia, for which place he recently left with a deserter from the army, Lawrence Aber, by name. Simmonds, expected to turn Aber over to the government officials in Norfork, after which he expected to receive a reward of fifty dollars

Aber, however, in spite of the fact that he gave himself up, and declared that he was tired of dodging the officers, had other notions in his head. When the train had arrived at a point about one hundred miles from their destination, Aber, said that he wished to go to the back of the car for a short time, and requested the officer to remove his handcuffs so that he would not appear conspicious.

As Aber had cultivated the good will of Simmonds during the trip and had seemed to be a most model prisoner, Simmonds consented, but immediately changed his mind However, Aber refused to submit to being handcuffed again, and led the office a chase thorugh the whole train At last when the train was rounding a curve and had slowed up a trifle Aber leaped from a car window and disappeared in the darkness and since that time has been seen no more.

Simmonds returned yesterday afternoon, but without the fifty dollar reward which he expected to bring back

TEXAS LEAGUE MAY DROP OKLA. CITY

By United Press

Dallas, Dec 16.—That Oklahoma City may be dropped in the meeting to beheld in Dallas Sunday morning by Texas League magnates is the rumor circulated. SECRECY SURROUNDS THE INVESTIGATION

By United Press.

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 16.—Secrecy enforced by husky marshals and backed up by discouragingly reticent officials is surrounding the Federal Grand Jury inquiry into the dynamite plot—such a rapport of secrecy that tonight only the jurors, two witnesses and a couple of officials knew just what happened behind the closed doors of the jury room. The evidence examined by the grand jury today was largely documentary It included bundle after bundle of letters taken from the files of the iron workers' union headquarters here and a number of their papers As a check on these documents, Mrs. Andrew J Hull, formerly Miss Edith Weinbenr and bookkeeper in John J McNamara's office was interrogated. Officials have hinted that Mrs. Hull may have knowledge of the disposition of the so-called "organizing fund" that passed through J J McNamara's hands

PLANT MORE FEEDSTUFF

AN ACRE TO EACH HEAD OF LIVESTOCK IS SLOGAN OF WICHITA COUNTY FARMERS.

ON THE COTTON ACREAGE

Farmers Declare if More Feedstuff Is Planted This Will Take Care of Itself.

"Plant one acre of feedstuff for every head of livestock on the farm," was the slogan adopted by the farmers of Wichita county, gathered at the Chamber of Commerce rooms Saturday afternoon to discuss steps to bring about better conditions on the farm.

Eleven o'clock in the morning the hour set for the meeting called by W. C. Myers, the chairman appointed by Governor Colquitt to take steps to secure the co-operation of the farmers and business men in a movement to reduce the cotton acreage as a means of obtaining a better price for cotton, proved too early and the meeting was postponed until this afternoon, when a small number of farmers gathered.

It seemed the concensus of opinion that if the farmers could plant a larger acreage in oats, corn and other feed crops, the cotton acreage would take care of itself. A resolution was adopted urging the farmers of the county to plant more feed crops. In this connection the chairman was authorized to appoint a committee to confer with the directors of the Chamber of Commerce with a view of taking steps to provide good seed oats for the farmers who would plant the same next spring.

SNEPP FINDS A CHANGE IN FEELING

Farmers Along the Wichita Falls Route Jubilant Since the Recent Rains.

Harry David Snepp, commercial agent of the Wichita Falls Route, returned yesterady from a trip over the Northwestern line in Oklahoma, and reports a wonderful change in the sentiment in that section over the business outlook and the crop prospects. Before the rain last week farmers had become about discouraged over the low price of cotton and the poor showing for the future, and since the rain everything had taken on a new look. Merchants, too had about exhausted their resources in carrying credits and were fearful about buying for the future. Some had already gone so far as to cancel orders placed for stock, but since the rain they had replaced the original orders and had even placed larger ones. This is especially true of agricultural implements and vehicles.

Mr. Snepp also said that the wheat in that section was looking fine, and that farmers were now planting as fast as they could, and that the acreage to be sowen in oats would be larger than ever before, as almost a perfect season was in the ground.

There is also a good deal of oil talk in the towns along the line, and some active development would be in progress in a very short time.

Mr. Snepp's views in regard to Oklahoma is in accord with that heard on all sides in Wichita county. Farmers in this city from all sections of the county yesterday were a unit in their enthusiasm in regard to crop prospects and nearly every one feels that a good wheat and oat yield is as certain as anything can be this far in advance.

GO TO PEACE CONFERENCE

TANG SHAO YI, WITH EIGHTY ATTENDANTS ON WAY TO MEET REVOLUTIONARY LEADERS AT SHANGHAI.

END OF MANCHU DYNASTY

Revolutionary Leaders Will Demand That Manchus Be Merged With Chinese.

Shanghai, Dec. 16.—Tang Shao Yi, Imperial plenipotentiary appointed by Premier Yuan Shi Kai to negotiate terms of peace with the victorious revolutionists is to arrive in Shanghai early on Sunday. Four representatives of Gen. Li Yuen Heng, the revolutionary leader, are traveling in the same boat with Tang Shoa Yi. The republicans are determined to demand that the dynasty be brought to a close and that the Manchus as a class can be merged with the Chinese together with their dependencies. Tang Shao Yi is accompanied by a suite of assistants and personal servants numbering about eighty. The party is making the voyage on the chartered river boat Tung Ting, from Hankow. On their arrival they will have traveled 800 miles along the river Yang Tse Kiang, which is patrolled by a score of revolutionary cruisers and gunboats. They will have passed under the guns of a dozen well fortified forts and will have touched numerous towns in possession of and governed by revolutionaries. Tang Shao Yi will not have seen an Imperial soldier or yellow flag, since he left Hankow.

Included in the party are two prominent officials, Yen Shi Si, of the board of finances, and Yang Shi Chi, former president of the board of communication, who will act as counsellors at the peace conference. He also has with him 22 representatives of different provinces of China, who've been selected to offset the revolutionary convention now sitting at Nanking.

RAILROAD WILL OBSERVE HOLIDAYS

Superintendent Sullivan of the Wichita Falls Route has issued a bulletin stating that Christmas and New Years' Days will be observed by the railroad company as legal holidays.

The bulletin follows:

Monday, December 25th, Christmas Day, and Monday, January 1st, New Years Day, will be observed as legal holidays, and all work will be suspended on these days, that is not absolutely necessary. Shops will be closed down and as much reduction in track department, and bridge and building department will be made as can be consistent with safety. Train service will be curtailed to the minimum, local freight trains will be run on all divisions and will handle local freight and full tonnage, but will do only what switching is absolutely necessary.

NEBRASKA FAVORS WOODROW WILSON

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 17.—The Woodrow Wilson boom in Nebraska has taken shape and, supported by the most important Democrats of the State, the "Wilson League" is pledging its members to carry the presidential primary for the New Jersey governor. Nebraska will be the first state in the Union to instruct its presidential delegation and for that reason a special effort will be made to have this state indorse Wilson's candidacy. The delegation in this statewide primary at which every Democrat can vote. The state convention simply construct the platform for the candidates and has nothing to do with appointing the delegation to the national convention. The date upon which the primary is held is fixed by law and this date is so early in the year that Nebraska Democrats will have already instructed the delegation before any other state holds a convention.

Harmon boomers, too, are seeking the support of the Democracy of the state, but whereas the Harmon boom is a "made" affair the Wilson sentiment is altogether spontaneous. The committee of seventy-five," which has charge of Governor Wilson's interests in Omoha, includes J. J. Sullivan, formerly supreme court judge; C. J. Smythe, formerly attorney general; I. J. Dunn, who placed William J. Bryan in nomination at the Denver convention; P. E. McKillip, formerly Democartic nominee for Congress; Lee Herdman, personal friend of W. J. Bryan; Herbert Daniel, United States commissioner and Jeremiah Howard, a member of the state legislature. The list is not one of office seekers and small politicians, but contains the names of some of the most influential and solid business men of the city. The president is J. W. Woodbrough, a widely known attorney and never an office-seeker.

Out in the state the members of the Wilson League are of just the same calibre as compose the Omaha branch. The county committees are made up of men who do things. It is the intention of the league to place a committee in every precinct in the state and before January 1 this will be done.

Wilson's candidacy has been well received by the Democratic press in Nebraska, and at present twenty-two newspapers are supporting him. This number is being added to right along. The Omaha World-Herald, the leading Democratic newspaper in the state is neither supporting nor fighting Wilson, but speaks very favorably of his candidacy.

NEW PASTOR HAS BEGUN HIS WORK

Rev. J. E. Coe, the new pastor of the First M. E. Church, corner of Seventh and Lamar streets, has begun his work with an energy and a spirit that promises his pastorate here will be very successful and productive of good results.

Rev. Coe was born and raised in Kansas and is a graduate of Baker University and Drew Theological Seminary at Madison, New Jersey. He entered the active ministry in 1898 and worked two years and a half in Topeka, when he was transferred to the Demoines Conference in Iowa. He filled four pastorates there and a few weeks ago was transferred from Harlan, Iowa to Wichita Falls by Bishop Quayle at the last session of the Austin conference.

We especially invite the city people who wish to give dinner parties to call 880, the Westland. 171-tfc

Half Million Dollar Necklace As a Christmas Present

New York, Dec. 16.—Of all the Christmas gifts that will gladden the hearts of the women this year, it is safe to say that none will be quite so wonderful or costly as the one-half million-dollar pearl necklace that Judge Elbert H. Gary has given to his wife.

It isn't exactly a Christmas present, since part of it has been in Mrs. Gary's possession for some time. But then it takes on a real Christmas spirit any way, through the fact that it was not until just a few days ago that the last pearls to complete the ornament were found and strung.

It is a beautiful rope of pearls graduating from the center one, almost the size of a cherry, to the small ones at the ends, which are joined by a splendid diamond and emerald clasp. It is perhaps as valuable a single strand as can be found.

The necklace falls from around Mrs. Gary's neck in a loop to below her bosom. There are a few more than one hundred pearls in the string and each one is absolutely perfect—a rare thing to be able to say about these gems, as lovers of them know.

The beginning of the present necklace was with one far more modest several years ago. Both Judge and Mrs. Gary are very fond of pearls and so they gave themselves over to the pleasant hobby of collecting them, inclining their choice to such as would look best in a necklace.

As the collection grew the pearls they wanted grew increasingly difficult to find, because of the unusually large size which was required to match up with the big ones in the center.

Two years ago a large number were added to the necklace by purchase in Paris and this year the gaps were finally filled through New York shops. Half a million dollars is said to be a conservative estimate, one Fifth Avenue jeweler making the statement yesterday that it was easily worth $500,000. In figuring this price there is taken into account the manner in which the pearls are matched, their size and their perfection.

Mr. Gary is the chairman of the board of directors and chairman of the finance committee of the United States Steel Corporation. His fortune has been variously estimated at from 5 million to 50 million dollars, one who knows him well putting it at the latter sum.

Both heand Mrs. Gary are unostentatious and do not go in for society in the common acceptance of the word. They like their associates to be distinguished more for culture and intellect than for money or position. Both of them are charitably inclined and privately support several institutions. THE RUSSIANS ARE SENSITIVE

THREATEN TO BREAK FRIENLY RELATIONS WITH U. S. IF SULZER RESOLUTION IS ADOPTED.

THE AMBASSADOR PROTESTS

Extreme Reticense of All Concerned Makes Details Difficult to Obtain.

By Associated Press.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 16.—What, in diplomatic language, is interpreted as practically a threat by Russia to severe all friendly relations with the United States in event that Congress goes ahead with the plan to abrogate the treaty of 1832 with that country, has been made to President Taft and Secretary of State Knox by the Russian Ambassador, George Bakhmateff.

Mr Bakhmeteff protected against the Sulzer resolution for the abrogation of the treaty on the ground that its final adoption would be inconsistent with the long friendship that has existed between the United States and Russia. Owing to the reticence of all concerned in negotiations, it was impossible to learn today the exact nature of the protest. It is believed however to have been directed principally against the language of the Sulzer resolution, which boldly declares that Russia has violated the terms of the treaty of 1832. When told this, Mr Sulzer, chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Relations, declared he saw nothing insulting "to sensitive Russia" in his resolution and believed it would go through the Senate without modification.

—o—

Civic League Meeting.

The ladies of the Civic League met Thrusday afternoon with Mrs. A. Zundelowitz, on Lamar avenue and some important business came up before the meeting.

Among other things the fact that Mrs. O. B. Colquitt had sent ten thousand Red Cross seals to Mrs. Boger, president of the Civic League, with a request that that number be disposed of in this city during the Christmas holidays, was discussed and acted upon. The League decided to undertake the task of disposing of these Red Cross seals, and committees were appointed by the president, she having been given authority to do so by Mrs. Colquitt, and these committees will take personal charge of the disposal of the Red Cross seals.

The Mesdames J. A. Kemp, Minnie May Addickes, Wiley Wyatt, C. W. Snider, H. O. Cravens, R. E Huff, G. D. Anderson, Ed R. List and Mrs. T. R. Boger are the members of the committee which will have active charge of the Red Cross work, and a campaign will be inaugurated at once by means of which it is hoped to be able to place Wichita Falls on the honor list among the cities of this state, an event which can only happen through the disposal of the ten thousand Red Cross seals here.

Slides to be shown in several moving picture shows and perhaps in the opera house for the purpose of demonstrating the need of such work, are expected to arrive in a few days when they will be shown for the benefit of the public and much good is expected to be accomplished in this way.

The Civic League also discussed measures by means of which the City Park can be improved, and upon a motion it was decided to thoroughly go through the details of the matter at another meeting.

Mrs. Boger, who attended the State Federation of Women's Clubs, which recently met in Houston, made a report on the proceedings of that meeting, which report was given careful attention.

It was also decided to keep open house New Year's day, but teh exact place was not determined and will be announced at a later date. Refreshments were served, after which the League adjourned.

A Dinner Party.

Mrs. T. T. Reece assited her mother, Mrs M. L. Reid Tuesday evening in entertaining a few of County Clerk W A Reid's friends who were together last summer in Colorado.

A course dinner was served, the table being beautifully decorated with carnations, one of which was presented to each guest as a favor. A cut glass vase of carnations on a mirrored plateau surrounded by smilax was especially attractive as a decoration feature, besides which, the whole house was made beautiful by clusters of carnations tastefully arranged.

After dinner had been served, the guests adjourned to the parlor, where reminiscences of last summer spent in Colorado were related by all present.

Those present at the dinner included Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Reece, Mrs A. Darnell, A. H. Brittain, David P Dailey and E. W. Pyle, in addition to Mrs. C. E. Reid, the hostess, and Walter reid, the honoree.

Sewing Circle.

Thursday afternoon beginning at 3 o'clock, the ladies of the Sewing Circle met at the home of Mrs. Jud Pressley on 11th street, where the last meeting which will be held this year took place, and it proved to be a most interesting one.

Following the usual custom of the society, needle work was the entertainment of the afternoon, and every member present brought her sewing and between stitches conversation was indulged in. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Pressely, asisted by Miss Lena Gardner, a salad course having been prepared.

What probably made this patricular meeting one of the most interesting which has been held this year was a "grab bag," from which each person present drew something, and the article drawn was then presented to that person as a Christmas gift. The bag had been filled with different works of art, sewing, etc, such as sofa pillows, painted pictures, china and the like, al lof which were made at their homes by the several members of the club for distribution as Christmas presents at this meeting.

The club then adjourned to meet again after the Christmas holidays with Miss Lena Gardner on Tenth street. The following ladies were present: Mesdames Jud Pressley Claud Montgomery, J. O. McDowell Charles Hartsook, M J. Gardner and the hostess.

Art Literature Club.

Owing to the illness of the press reporter, due credit was not given the faithful few ho braved the elements and met with Mrs. Filgo on November 15th. Every paper was brought up in excellent form. These were:

Egyptian Decorations; the use of color and geometric ornament; natural and symbolic motions, by Miss Chillers.

Chaldean and Assyrian Decoration; characteristic designs and their origin, by Mrs. Harris.

Greek Decoration; the Anthemian Acanthus Leaf and other motives, Miss Ward.

Greek Vases, by Mrs Kahn.

Those present reported having enjoyed these papers and later the delightful refreshments served by the hostess.

On December 5th the club held its last meeting for the year with Mrs. E. L. Smith. Music was provided by Mrs. Hartsook and the following papers were read:

Pompeian Wall Decoration, and its Modern Revival, Mrs. Seelinger.

Byzantine Ornament, the Catacombs and their art, Mrs. Bean.

Motives: Significance and Treatment—the cross, palm, dove, peacock and vine, Mrs. Harris.

Mrs. Gebhard sent in her resignation as president of the club on account of continued ill health, which was accepted, and Mrs H. G. Harris was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy. Mrs Lee Smith was elected to fill Mrs. Harris' unexpired term as secretary.

The meeting was then turned over to the hostess and a lovely informal time was enjoyed over the dainty refreshments provided.

The next meeting will be held January 2nd with Miss Seeliger

—o—

Chafting Dish Party.

A chafing dish party was given Friday evening by the Misses Lavinia Randle and Kate McSpadden at the home of Rev and Mrs. J P Boone, 108 Tenth street.

The feature of the evening was the making of fudge and divinity, which queens of canudys have achieved so much fame during the last few years.

An evening thoroughly enjoyed by all present was the unanimous verdict of the Misses Lizzie Lawler, Lela Simmons, Lavinia Randle, Kate McSpadden and the Messrs. Marvin Smith, Lawrence Steel, George Wilson, Cliff Gibson and John W. Thomas.

—o—

Y. W. C. A. Bazaar.

The ladies of the Y. W. C. A, as was advertised in this paper, held their bazaar Friday and Saturday in the quarters of that organization in the Kemp and Kell building on 8th street, and a most successful sale was the result of the bazaar.

On account of the inclemency of the weather during last Friday and Saturday, when the streets were in such a condition that many who probably intended to buy Christmas goods at this bazaar were unable to do so, the ladies have decided to continue the sale during next week, and the booths will therefore be restocked in anticipation of the demand for their goods at this sale which will begin Monday morning.

The booth system was found to be very successful, and the attractive decorations were admired by many Even a larger amount of money than was expected was taken in by the ladies as a result of their bazaar Friday and yesterday, and this money will be devoted towards paying the expenses of the organization in this city.

New York December 16 — Three piece costumes are very much in vogue this season but there is also a great demand for one piece frocks which are more appropriate for wear under a fur or other separate coat than a three piece costume The fashionable shops display many attractive models of one piece frocks for both morning and afternoon wear

Serge broadcloth charmeuse silk cashmere silk serge velvet velveteen corduroy, even the heaviest woollens such as satine are used for the short one piece frocks At the recent Horse Show a good looking young woman of extremely slender figure wore effectively an unusual frock of black plush made prettily straightness and severity It buttoned all the way down the front was slightly short in waist and had its close fitting outline only by a cord of same of the plush There was a little collar of dull narrowly by black lynx trimming away from a guimpe and frill of lace Lace fine lace The sleeves were bordered by fur and there was a small band of the black lynx on the hem With this was worn a large black hat trimmed in natural [illegible] and a mons scarf of lynx which was wide enough and long enough to serve purpose of a coat in combination with so heavy a frock

Charming one piece [illegible] silk of one kind or another [illegible] very good from for wear [illegible] coats and these are still [illegible] by some more [illegible] the cleverness with which [illegible] ig note is introduced having much do with the success of the frock It is in this sort of thing that the French are peculiarly gifted and it is in this that our domestic model is very likely to fail even in copies of imported frocks unless the manufacturer brings over the materials with which to make an exact reproduction

One piece frocks of the heavier woollens seem too thick for comfort in steam heated houses though comfortable enough for cut door wear in winter weather Many of them have the wool so combined with satine or cliff that the cloth is not excessive weight about the upper part of the body the sleeves Big white collars of satine or cloth are used on many of the models in dark or neutral wool and though this idea has been sadly overworked it does add a most delightful touch to every developed

Among the three piece [illegible] separate [illegible] is of course [illegible] including [illegible] and the [illegible] will [illegible] interest [illegible] ments along [illegible] with promises a [illegible] early [illegible] in the spring The [illegible] shown in all [illegible] elegance from the simple [illegible] to the elaborate made with [illegible] the creation [illegible] and [illegible] to accompany [illegible] afternoon costume and [illegible] loose falling [illegible] [illegible] by size [illegible] important

A flat high collar of lace [illegible] the from normal waist line on a high glove and so disposed as to form a single point below the girdle is used in some of the imported frocks and the same idea has been developed on blouse designs but handsomely embroidered fine net seems a great favorite with these designers for the dress type of peplum blouse as the plained net is for tailored blouse purposes

Plain and striped velvets are [illegible] combined prominently among the semi tailored and tailored costumes Taxedo suits are the favorite one piece [illegible] frock or velvet with [illegible] in every fashionable [illegible] wardrobe Suits of plain one tone velvet or striped velvets [illegible] trimmed with fur of [illegible] [illegible] of the smartest [illegible] high collars that close about the throat [illegible] effect and these are often [illegible] with a big revers or [illegible] the front

Black and white [illegible] blue [illegible] are the [illegible] shades [illegible] in quality and quantity [illegible] dark [illegible] show the greatest [illegible] of dressiness at [illegible] of prices Veiled effects are still in vogue Chiffon cloth and the transparent materials over bright shades of satin [illegible] a certain tone to a dull costume not otherwise obtainable

Simplicity is the keynote of the smartest blouse Many are out with kimono sleeves although the newer fashions show long sleeves fitting the arm very snugly at the wrist and frequently showing a frill of lace or net falling over the hand

Large collars of lace and net are worn over the plained blouses These are square or pointed in the back and have the fichu effect in front crossing just below the bust and fastening under the girdle

Hand tucked blouses showing fine embroidery are the very acme of refinement and good taste Chiffon or marquisette embroidered and tucked by hand and mounted over a contrasting color makes the most beautiful of all the costume blouses

Black and white is a great feature in gowns especially when combined with a coral tint or coral jewelry

Most fashionable materials are [illegible] and heavy Tailored costumes are made up of the woolly goods and the suits and dresses even plush is used with heavy [illegible] fringe [illegible] trimmings

—o—

Civic League Meeting.

The ladies of the Civic League met Thursday afternoon with Mrs. A Zundelowitz, on Lamar avenue and some important business came up before the meeting.

Among other things the fact that Mrs. O. B. Colquitt had sent ten thousand Red Cross seals to Mrs. Boger, president of the Civic League, with a request that that number be disposed of in this city during the Christmas holidays, was discussed and acted upon. The League decided to undertake the task of disposing of these Red Cross seals, and committees were appointed by the president, she having been given authority to do so by Mrs. Colquitt, and these committees will take personal charge of the disposal of the Red Cross seals

The Mesdames J. A. Kemp, Minnie May Addickes, Wiley Wyatt, C W Snider, H. O. Cravens, R. E. Huff, G. D. Anderson, Ed R. List and Mrs T. R Boger are the members of the committee which will have active charge of the Red Cross work, and a campaign will be inaugurated at once by means of which it is hoped to be able to place Wichita Falls on the honor list among the cities of this state, an event which can only happen through the disposal of the ten thousand Red Cross seals here.

Slides to be shown in several moving picture shows and perhaps in the opera house for the purpose of demonstrating the need of such work, are expected to arrive in a few days when they will be shown for the benefit of the public and much good is expected to be accomplished in this way

The Civic League also discussed measures by means of which the City Park can be improved, and upon a motion it was decided to thoroughly go through the details of the matter at another meeting.

Mrs Boger, who attended the State Federation of Women's Clubs, which recently met in Houston, made a report on the proceedings of that meeting, which report was given careful attention.

It was also decided to keep open house New Year's day, but teh exact place was not determined and will be announced at a later date. Refreshments were served, after which the League adjourned.

A Dinner Party.

Mrs T. T Reece assited her mother, Mrs. M L. Reid Tuesday evening in entertaining a few of County Clerk W. A Reid's friends who were together last summer in Colorado.

A course dinner was served, the table being beautifully decorated with carnations, one of which was presented to each guest as a favor. A cut glass vase of carnations on a mirrored plateau surrounded by smilax was especially attractive as a decoration feature, besides which, the whole house was made beautiful by clusters of carnations tastefully arranged

After dinner had been served, the guests adjourned to the parlor, where reminiscences of last summer spent in Colorado were related by all present.

Those present at the dinner included Mr. and Mrs. J. T Montgomery, Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Reece, Mrs A. Darnell, A. H. Brittain, David P Dailey and E. W. Pyle, in addition to Mrs. C. E. Reid, the hostess, and Walter reid, the honoree.

There were sixteen ladies present and four tables were used as playing boards. Mrs. M. M. Murray, in a cut after the games had been finished won the favor of the afternoon. Refreshments in the form of a salad course were served.

The house was tastefully decorated for the occasion with varieties of Christmas colors, and Christmas cards were distributed to each guest

The following ladies were present: The Mesdames Wm. McGregor, J. W DuVal, O. T. Bacon, Alex Kahn, C P. Moore, of Petrolia; Harry Mae Happy Day, M. M. Murray, C. B Toney, Harry Bolding, W. W. —o—

Sewing Circle.

Thursday afternoon beginning at 3 o'clock, the ladies of the Sewing Circle met at the home of Mrs. Jud Pressley on 11th street, where the last meeting which will be held this year took place, and it proved to be a most interesting one.

Following the usual custom of the society, needle work was the entertainment of the afternoon, and every member present brought her sewing and between stitches conversation was indulged in. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Pressely, asisted by Miss Lena Gardner, a salad course having been prepared.

What probably made this patricular meeting one of the most interesting which has been held this year was a "grab bag," from which each person present drew something, and the article drawn was then presented to that person as a Christmas gift. The bag had been filled with different works of art, sewing, etc, such as sofa pillows, painted pictures, china and the like, al lof which were made at their homes by the several members of the club for distribution as Christmas presents at this meeting.

The club then adjourned to meet again after the Christmas holidays with Miss Lena Gardner on Tenth street. The following ladies were present: Mesdames Jud Pressley Claud Montgomery, J O McDowell Charles Hartsook, M J Gardner and the hostess.

Art Literature Club.

Owing to the illness of the press reporter, due credit was not given the faithful few ho braved the elements and met with Mrs. Filgo on November 28th. Every paper was brought up in excellent form. These were:

Egyptian Decorations the use of color and geometric ornament; natural and symbolic motions, by Miss Chillers

Chaldean and Assyrian Decoration; characteristic designs and their origin, by Mrs. Harris.

Greek Decoration; the Anthemian Acanthus Leaf and other motives, Miss Ward.

Greek Vases, by Mrs Kahn.

Those present reported having enjoyed these papers and later the delightful refreshments served by the hostess.

On December 5th the club held its last meeting for the year with Mrs. E L. Smith. Music was provided by Mrs. Hartsook and the following papers were read:

Pompeian Wall Decoration, and its Modern Revival, Mrs. Seelinger.

Byzantine Ornament, the Catacombs and their art, Mrs. Bean

Motives: Significance and Treatment—the cross, palm, dove, peacock and vine, Mrs. Harris.

Mrs. Gebhard sent in her resignation as president of the club on account of continued ill health, which was accepted, and Mrs. H. G. Harris was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy. Mrs Lee Smith was elected to fill Mrs. Harris' unexpired term as secretary.

The meeting was then turned over to the hostess and a lovely informal time was enjoyed over the dainty refreshments provided.

The next meeting will be held January 2nd with Miss Seeliger

—o—

Chafing Dish Party.

A chafing dish party was given Friday evening by the Misses Lavinia Randle and Kate McSpadden at the home of Rev and Mrs. J. P. Boone, 108 Tenth street.

The feature of the evening was the making of fudge and divinity, which vans of canudys have achieved so much fame during the last few years.

An evening thoroughly enjoyed by all present was the unanimous verdict of the Misses Lizzie Lawler, Lela Simmons, Lavinia Randle, Kate McSpadden and the Messrs. Marvin Smith, Lawrence Steel, George Wilson, Cliff Gibson and John W. Thomas

—o—

Birthday Party.

Mrs Wiley Blair gave her son, Edwin Foster, a birthday party Friday evening in honor of his tenth birthday, a few of the children of the neighborhood being invited.

Y. W. C. A. Bazaar.

The ladies of the Y. W. C. A., as was advertised in this paper, held their bazaar Friday and Saturday in the quarters of that organization in the Kemp and Kell building on 8th street, and a most successful sale was the result of the bazaar

On account of the inclemency of the weather during last Friday and Saturday, when the streets were in such a condition that many who probably intended to buy Christmas goods at this bazaar were unable to do so, the ladies have decided to continue the sale during next week, and the booths will therefore be restocked in anticipation of the demand for their goods at this sale which will begin Monday morning.

The booth system was found to be very successful, and the attractive decorations were admired by many Even a larger amount of money than was expected was taken in by the ladies as a result of their bazaar Friday and yesterday, and this money will be devoted towards paying the expenses of the organization in this city.

New York December 16.—Three piece costumes are very much in vogue this season but there is also a great demand for one piece frocks which are more appropriate for wear under a fur or other separate coat than a three piece costume. Lesson XII.—Fourth Quarter, For Dec. 17, 1911.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Neh. viii, 1-12. Memory Verses, 2, 3—Golden Text, Ps xix, 7—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M Stearns.

The temple being finished and also the wall around the city (chapter vi 15, Ez. vi 14, 15), they are better prepared to hear the word of God in order to do it. The Lord Jesus said one day when some one said what a blessed woman His mother was. "Yea, rather blessed are they that hear the word of God and keep it" On another occasion He said, "My mother and My brethren are these which hear the word of God and do it" (Luke xi, 28, viii, 21). Ezra was a priest and a ready scribe in the law of Moses and had prepared his heart to seek the law of the Lord and to do it and to teach it (verses 1, 2; Ez. vii, 6, 10). He was therefore just the right man to conduct this Bible conference. It was attended by both men and women and all that could hear with understanding (verses 2, 3), and they were an earnestly attentive congregation. As in the building of the wall, it was strikingly suggestive that they should begin and end at the sheep gate, inasmuch as no work will stand that is not connected with the blood of the Lamb. So in this lesson it seems most appropriate that the people should drink of the living water of the word at the water gate (verses 1, 3), or, as in xii, 37, the fountain gate. In Jer ii, 13, the Lord calls Himself the fountain of living waters, and in Eph v, 26, he is said to sanctify and cleanse His people with the washing of water by the word. Compare also Ps cxix, 9 It was a long session from morning until midday (verse 3), and they kept it up from the first day unto the last day of the feast (verse 18), and there was very great gladness, with confession of sin and separation from the world (viii, 17; ix, 1 3). It is interesting to notice just thirteen men associated with Ezra in verses 2 and 7, and Dr Bullinger calls attention to the first use of thirteen as associated with rebellion (Gen. xiv, 4) It was from the results of persistent rebellion that Ezra was seeking to lead the people back to God. It was at the thirteenth march around Jericho that the walls fell, and this coming back to God from all their wanderings was like the overthrow of a spiritual Jericho There were just fourteen with Ezra, a twice seven, suggesting the perfection of God's dealings with His people. There was one with Ezra invisible to ordinary eyes, the only one worth considering; and His great word of encouragement is always, "I am with you" (Ex iii, 12; Josh. i, 5; Judg. vi, 16; Isa xli, 10; Hag i, 13; ii, 4) The response of the people and their attitude before God seem to indicate that their hearts were right with Him, and the heart is everything (II Chron xvi, 9; I Sam xvi, 7)

Reading and exposition of the word of God are the great need of souls everywhere, and verse 8 seems to cover it simply and fully, "They read in the book in the law of God distinctly and gave the sense and caused them to understand the reading" In Deut xxvii, 8; Hab. ii, 2, the instructions were to write plainly that those reading might run and tell. The way of Baruch in Jer xxxvi, 8, is a good way, "Reading in the book the words of the Lord in the Lord's house Just the word of God without note or comment or explanation has often wrought the salvation of a soul by the power of the Holy Spirit. Sometimes the Lord uses the human instrument to open up the word more fully as in the case of Philip and the Ethiopian who said to him 'How can I understand except some man should guide me'" (Acts viii 30 31) On the resurrection day the Lord Jesus expounded or interpreted the Scriptures to the two men with whom He walked to Emmaus and the same evening opened the understanding of the disciples that they might understand the Scriptures (Luke xxiv 27, 44 45)

The words of the Lord in the power of the Spirit, as Ezra and the Levites taught the people, convinced them of sin and they wept but the same spirit who convinces of sin also convinces of righteousness (John xvi, 8-10) and shows that, where there is true penitence there are the blotting out of sin and the imparting of perfect righteousness, so that one can say, 'In the Lord have I righteousness and strength' (Isa xlii, 25, xlv, 24) Compare II Cor v, 21; Rom x, 4 Our lesson chapter is a seventh month chapter (verses 2, 14) beginning with the feast of trumpets and ending with the feast of tabernacles, but between the two came the great day of atonement (Lev. xxiii, 24, 27, 34), the only true ground of all real joy (Lev. xvii 11, Gal iii, 13). "Mourn not nor weep neither be ye grieved; neither be ye sorry" (verses 9, 10, 11), reminds us of the words of the Lord Jesus to penitent sinners, "Son, be of good cheer, daughter, be of good cheer" (Matt. ix, 2, 22, R. V). We think also of the Ethiopian who went on his way rejoicing, of the jailer and his household who rejoiced, believing in God, of the great joy in Samaria, of the joy in heaven over one sinner that repenteth and of the joy and peace, the unspeakable joy, which is the privilege of every believer (Acts viii, 8, 39, xvi, 34, Lu xv, 7 10, Rom xv, 13, I Pet. i, 8).

THE CHORUS WENT TO CHURCH

But One Girl Believed It Improper to Go in a Taxi and Missed.

The second girl from the end, whose real name is Violet St. Clair, and if you don't believe it you can ask anyone in Circleville, O., where she was at the confectionery counter in the Model Bakery before she became second girl from the end in the chorus of the 'Bohemians,' missed the Rev W. W. Bustard's morning sermon at the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church recently.

Nearly all the others in the chorus of the 'Bohemians" company did attend on invitation from Doctor Bustard It was a special occasion and Miss Violet St. Clair had fully intended to go, but was delayed until it was too late by an argument about whether it is good form to go to church in taxicabs Miss St Clair argued that it is perfectly all right. The girl who rooms with Miss St Clair and who wears a balck velvet ribbon in her very light hair and lisps prettily when she sings, maintained that it seemed gay and irrelevant to take a taxicab to church, and she was very sure it isn't done

'We'll leave it to the clerk,' said Miss St Clair's roommate 'he ought to know whether it is done in Cleveland'

I want to ask you a question said Miss St Clair "Is it good form to go to church in a taxi?"

"I've bit on enough of those gags today' said the clerk "Go tell it to someone else'

So the question about what is good form with taxicabs was no nearer settlement than before Then when it was decided that they should walk anyhow, Miss St. Clair couldn't find her polo coat. They looked for it fifteen minutes before Miss St. Clair learned that another girl had barrowed it to wear to the church, and then it was so late that the girl who wore a black velvet ribbon in her pretty light hair, and who lisps prettily when she sings, couldn't go either

"So, said Miss St. Clair, 'Lois and I went in the evening It was nice I think the Rev Mr Bustard is a swell minister"

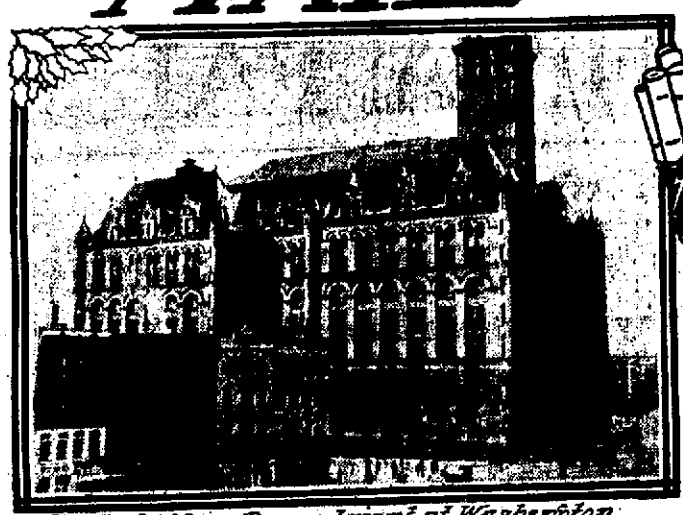
Santa Claus' MAIL



The Post Office Department at Washington "The Headquarters of the Santa Claus Mail"

Handling Santa Claus Mail in a Big Post Office Canceling Machine in Foreground

Postmaster General Frank Hitchcock

Opening Letters Addressed to Santa Claus at the U.S. Dead Letter Office

Sorting Santa Claus Letters Preparatory to Distributing them to Philanthropists

SANTA CLAUS is becoming a regular hoodoo to Uncle Sam. Impossible, unthinkable, unbelievable and high treason, you declare hotly in defense of the kindly old fellow, but it is a fact, nevertheless. And the worst of it is that the patron saint of our merriest holiday bids fair to prove more of a bug-bear to our Federal guardian at this Christmas season of 1911 than he has ever done in the past—with one possible exception. Even as this meets the eyes of readers there are sorely-tired officials in Washington who are cudgeling their brains and figuratively, if not literally tearing their hair because of the way in which Santa Claus upsets routine in certain government offices.

Of course all our readers appreciate that the great governmental institution which we are all wont to familiarly dub Uncle Sam is a very complex organizism and by this same token it follows that in most spheres only a minor and indirect influence is exerted by Santa Claus. In one domain, however, he does play hob and that one is the Post Office Department, which is far and away the biggest business enterprise under the government, having on its payrolls upward of one-third of a million people or several times as many as are enlisted in our army or navy. Now, for everybody in the postal army, from the Postmaster General to the mail carrier on the most isolated rural route, the Christmas holidays bring extra work—added responsibilities that may even somewhat mar the personal enjoyment of the yuletide. Yet it may surprise you to learn that it is not this rush work that is putting dear old Santy into the role of troublemaker—particularly so this year.

It is Santa Claus' personal mail which is just now causing some of the captains of the postal cohorts to lay awake nights. Now the bewhiskered driver of the reindeer team gets a tremendous volume of mail during the fortnight before Christmas. Indeed there are posted to him every day during that interim a dozen times as many letters as are addressed to the President of the United States, who, under ordinary circumstances, is supposed to receive the heaviest personal mail of any individual in the world. And Santa displays a lamentable inability to handle his correspondence. Perhaps it is not to be wondered at, considering what deluge of missives are dispatched to him and how busy he must be with his other duties at this time of year, but be that as it may the old fellow has never been known to formally acknowledge the receipts of a letter, much less to answer it in the ordinary way. Worse yet, he will not even call for the accumulation of mail that is waiting for him at every postoffice up and down the land, and thus he forces Uncle Sam to dispose of the Santa Claus mail as best he can.

Uncle Sam long ago gave up the effort to locate Santa Claus' permanent address and forward thither his unclaimed mail. Indeed, some of the present officials at the Post Office Department being unable to get any clue to Santa Claus' whereabouts decreed, those many years back, that he must be regarded as a "fictitious personage." This puts his mail in the "unclaimed class." The regulations of the Post Office Department which are based upon laws passed by Congress provide that all mail which cannot be delivered because of undecipherable or insufficient address or for any other reason must be sent to the Dead Letter Office at Washington, where an effort is made by the government's greatest experts to either set these derelicts of the mails on the right road to their destination or else return them to the writers. It is further provided that when it is impossible to ascertain the name or address of the senders of mail addressed to fictitious persons the postal waifs must be destroyed, and this has been the unhappy fate of bushels upon bushels of Santa Claus' letters during the past decade or two.—

This year, however, is to see a change in the disposition of the Santa Claus mail. All the people who have ever had an opportunity to peep into any of the Santa Claus letters at the Dead Letter Office have been brought to realize that many of these letters are from children whose only chance of a merry Christmas lies in an appeal to Santy. Most children, seemingly write a Christmas letter to the fur-clad gift-giver. Many of the appeals show by the paper and envelopes used that they have been prepared in comfortable or even luxurious homes and we may suspect that a fond father or mother was looking over the shoulder of the young applicant for Xmas boons. But there are others which, as has been said, obviously come from poor children and have been written without the knowledge of their parents. These are the letters which many kind-hearted folk feel should be taken in hand by persons who would see to it that the contents were brought to the attention of Santa Claus—presuming that he is too busy to read the letters himself.

The present Postmaster-General of the United States, for all that he is a bachelor and presumably not very susceptible to childish influence, has taken this same view of it. Like his predecessors, he in the past only an obstacle that they couldn't get around, but Mr. Hitchcock has seemingly spied a loophole for along about the first week in November of this year he issued one of the few official orders which has ever been promulgated with reference to Santa Claus This order reads: "Postmasters are authorized to deliver all letters arriving at their respective postoffices between December 15, 1911 and January 1, 1912, inclusive which are addressed plainly and unmistakably to 'Santa Claus' without any other terms or expressions identifying the person for whom such letters are intended, to responsible institutions or individuals in the town or city of address who may desire to use them exclusively for philanthrophic purposes. In the event that these letters are requested by more than one such institution or individual the postmaster shall distribute them in such proportion as he may deem proper. (Signed) Frank H. Hitchcock, Postmaster-General."

Seemingly the new scheme was a grand good thing and there was much rejoicing over the order on the part of tender-hearted people everywhere who had been pained by the thought that any childish appeal to Santa Claus should go unanswered. But the subordinate officials at the Postoffice Department soon began to have misgivings regarding the outcome, for no sooner had the new order reached the ears of the postmasters out through the country than the Department began to be deluged with questions regarding it. It would require a column of this paper to enumerate all the queries that were propounded as to this seemingly simple order, but just as a sample it may be cited that innumerable postmasters told of their perplexities somewhat in this wise: "I have an application for the Santa Claus letters from John Jones, who says that he is a philanthropist, but I don't know whether he is or not. What shall I do?

Moreover, no sooner was the ink dry on Mr. Hitchcock's new order that it became apparent that some of the unusual conditions governing the Santa Claus mail had not been taken into account. One factor that has added to the perplexities of the new scheme for handling this Christmas flood of letters is the "postage due" on the Santy letters. It seems that a comparatively small portion of Santy's correspondents place two cent stamps on their letters. Many deem a one cent stamp sufficient and a yet larger proportion affix no stamp whatever. Now under the postal regulations no person can have possession of a letter on which full postage has not been paid without making up the shortage to the government. In the case of a person making application for only a few Santa Claus' letters this postage due would be a trival matter, but it might mean a tidy sum to a charitable or benevolent organization planning to handle hundreds of the letters.

With the postal authorities wrestling with the new scheme of finding acceptable proxies for Santa Claus there was naturally recalled to some of the officials a former experience. The public has probably forgotten it, but the Post Office Department made one previous attempt to utilize the Santa Claus letters as a means of doing good. These childish appeals to be remembered at the season of universal good will have been crowding the mail bags for Decembers farther back than the oldest citizens can recall, and from time out of mind there have been suggestions that something should be done to answer to the prayers of the poor tots who manifested such sublime faith. It was not however until 1903 that a formal application was made to the Post Office Department to divert these unclaimed letters to such an end. Then the matter was referred to the legal experts of the government who declared that in their opinion no such action could be taken without imperiling that sancity of the mails of which Uncle Sam is so proud—that respect for the seal of the Post Office Department which prescribes that not even a postmaster nor yet the Postmaster-General himself may open a sealed envelope after it has been deposited in the mails, except with the consent of the intended recipient.

This veto of the project stood unquestioned until Mr. Meyer, now Secretary of the Navy, was acting as Postmaster-General under President Roosevelt. Organizations and individuals in Mr. Meyer's home State, Massachusetts, and elsewhere appealed to him to allow them to use the Santa Claus letters as a medium of doing good and after obtained from the Attorney-General of the United States an opinion that allowed him some latitude in the matter he finally issued in December, 1907, an order very similar, but perhaps a trifle less explicit than the one which has just been promulgated by Postmaster-General Hitchcock. The confusion and turmoil that resulted at the postal headquarters are almost indescribable. The officials of the Dead Letter Office to whom it fell to reply to the telegrams and letters that poured in from postmasters who wanted instructions and advice, were almost distracted. The climax came on Christmas Eve, when a telegram was received from the Postmaster at Chicago, advised that 13,000 letters addressed to Santa Claus were stacked up in the office there and asking what should be done. Looking back upon this initial experiment Mr. Meyer said feelingly "Never again" and he issued the next year another order revoking his former order and directing that Santa Claus mail be disposed of through the regular channels as formerly. This order has been in force until Mr. Hitchcock concluded to make a try at allowing generous folk to impersonate Santy.

And just here attention may be called to the fact that under the order of the Postmaster-General only the letters addressed to Santa Claus can be given to applicants. Thousands upon thousands of what are, in effect Santa Claus letters are addressed to Kris Kringle or St. Nicholas but these will have to be sent to the Dead Letter Office in the regular course for these are the names of persons, and the Department is not going to run any risks of giving out a citizen whose name bore a resemblance to that of the popular idol of yuletide.

"The Traveling Salesman" is a Clean Cut Comedy and Appeals to all Classes of Theater Goers

The success of James Forbes latest comedy The Traveling Salesman which comes to the Wichita Theatre Tuesday night Dec 19 was cyclonic in both New York and Chicago in each of which cities it registered an exceptionally long run The Traveling Salesman, like Mr Forbes earlier comedy The Chorus Lady is typically American It depicts the life of a commercial traveler realistically and most humorously One of the strongest attributes of the comedy is that the interest starts with the curtain rise and the first act registers a success all down the line to an extent which makes the dialogue drag and is the old time unmitigated advertisement that there's a laugh in every line

Good clean cut comedy in plenty of character types sir credit in the Traveling Salesman which plays appeal to all classes of theatre goers The Traveling salesman is a type familiar to everyone and this is the first written that tells the humorous central figure and presents him in the light among the lighter characteristics without burlesquing in the least one of the most valuable aids to commerce the business world furnishes In the leading character of Bob Blake Mr Forbes shows a young drummer who knocks about in quite a reckless fashion and runs into varying phases of human nature that strew the path of us in the twentieth century nomad

In getting the surroundings and atmosphere Mr Forbes has gone to a purpose He has most cleverly rounded up the average hit off the life on the road by his humorous touches of character studies that reflect the general view of the game The same observing eyes and the same insight helped him spontaneously to the story in a fashion that has made this play a fine quality

The play opens with a scence in a railway station at Grand Crossings, a small city supposedly in the middle West on Christmas Day Beth Elliott pretty ticket seller and telegraph operator who owns property that is apparently worthless is sitting in her office when Bob Blake a drummer drops into the station and promptly falls in love with her at first sight Interference occurs that his employer is anticipating to defraud the girl of her land by buying it in at an unpaid tax sale At this juncture Blake steps in to frustrate the conspirators and succeeds in saving the land and winning the girl of his choice

"The White Sister"

In view of the over abundance of musical comedy and the lighter order of theatrical attractions there is always a pleasurable anticipation decidedly manifested in the interest of a genuine dramatic entertainment. Hence it is not at all surprising to note the general interest being taken in the engagement at the Wichita Theatre next month of The White Sister —Viola Allen's greatest success a dramatization of F Marion Crawford's universally read novel of the same title A play which has commanded the respectful attention of the clergy of every denomination and has won the highest esteem from the newspaper critics—all of whom proclaim that 'The White Sister' is the one particular intensely dramatic play woven around the elements of love and religion that is absolutely free from any attempts at sensationalism

'The White Sister will be offered with Miss Jeanne Towler who has been acknowledged by the leading critics of the country as one of the greatest emotional geniuses of the present day stage, in the title role and other artists of fine reputation Messrs Morrison and Warde, under whose auspices the production is made, have taken special pains to preserve the scenic atmosphere which gave this play its original prestige

Two good Shows Coming This week

Two good shows are coming to the Wichita Theatre this week Tuesday night the attraction will be The Traveling Salesman This is the first time that this splendid comedy has come to the Southwest and the company which will present it here is exceptionally good On Saturday night, December 23 The Clansman will be the attraction When this play showed here before the attendance not only broke the record for the theatre but for the company presenting the play as well It is not believed that it has lost any of its popularity here

ARMSTRONG'S PURPOSE.

Three Things He Set Out to Do in Writing "Alias Jimmy Valentine."

Most playwrights have a definite purpose in mind when they set about writing a play At least, that is the common supposition and the course they should pursue After we have seen some plays we doubt whether or not this fact is general At any rate they should start out to accomplish some purpose and if they fail they have at least made the attempt Some write to entertain, others to teach a lesson and still others to secure a certain weekly per cent of the play's income Paul Armstrong comes out and makes the assertion that he wrote Alias Jimmy Valentine which comes to the Wichita Theatre soon with three major ideas in mind First, he tried to show that certain classes of criminals are mildly insane that they ply their vocation without hope or chance of reward and commit crime simply because they are fascinated by it, held in the firm grasp of this fascination and cannot break away from its influence His second purpose was to expose the system by which paroled or discharged convicts are preyed upon by certain types of detectives who desire their services as stool pigeons and hamper them in every way in their desire to do right and lead good lives His third desire in writing the play was to portray graphically one or more instances where a criminal has been helped to better himself and forsake a life of crime through the good offices of others In this particular case, Valentine is changed from his course downward by the love of a good woman and that love is sufficiently compelling to bring about his complete regeneration Mr Armstrong asserts that whatever may be the ultimate 'money-getting power of his play, he has accomplished what he set out to do—and made his three points reasonably clear to the average theatre-goer

The Burnettes to Go? She's Not Alarmed

(Bartlesville Examiner)

Is it farewell forever to the brunettes?

Are the dark haired girls to be relegated?

Is it because they dont know the proper ingredients for chocolate fudge or that they cant make a success in the business world?

No It is neither of these It is because they seldom have that clinging helpless disposition that men look for in woman whom they ask to sail with them on that ever turbulent matrimonial sea At least this is what statisticians would have us believe

The blonde type of woman has been developed by a long process of selection in which men have always favored the golden haired girls to those who boast of darker tresses, says one And so it would seem, the girl with the blondecendree complexion has just about twice the chance of being loved and married as her darker rival

Marriage license clerks in the larger cities will tell you that two thirds of young America is today marrying blondes A Cleveland O paper recently conducted an exhaustive researched to determine just what percentage of blondes and brunettes are being married and this figure is the result

Expert testimony adduces the startling fact that blondes are essentially feminine and that practically all of the militant suffragettes are brunettes But the girls with the flashing eyes and the raven locks declare all the celebrated beauties of the world as well as the literary lights among the women are mostly brunettes

And then again artists almost always paint their beauties as blondes Blondes say it is nothing unusual a man should prefer them to their darker sisters It is only the development of human nature and men naturally like to look at some one whose type is different from the ordinary run they say

And women with no individuality of their own try to borrow some by bleaching their hair in imitation of the women of the more unusual coloring they declare

A woman blondes say cannot cultivate a military manner and at the same time be cute. All an suffragettes are the women who pride themselves on their ultra feminine dispositions the light haired women would have us believe

But in the face of these overwhelming arguments the brunettes are not in the laest frightened That Helen of Troy Cleoponta Madame Recamier, DuBarry Pompadour Rosa Bonheur and Chaminde were brunettes no one will for a moment dispute they say And among these were musicians artists and literateurs

We are not frightened over the outcome one dainty petite brunette said yesterday I guess the dark haired girls will be here as long as the blondes

And she smoothed a jacket of no descipable proportions over her hipless gown as she sauntered away

But all of this only leads us to believe that we may be raising a blonde race through a tendency of preferential selection Who knows but that the brunette in a generation or two may be a rarity hereabouts"

Even then however fickle man may turn from blondes and throw the bulb of his affection toward the black tressed beauties It all depends on his taste when there is scarcity

J M McGrath one of Wichita's successful farmers was in the city today Mr McGrath says the rains followed by the snow have put one of the best seasons in the ground for a number of years Especially does he expect excellent results by reasons of the snow being so rapid Whenever this occurs the ground will be mellow [illegible] not to raise good crops [illegible] one of the best [illegible] that can be had to propitate crops

News From the Oil Fields

The most important development of the week in the oil fields around Wichita Falls has been the striking of oil and gas in the Ninety Nine Pumping Company's well northwest of Petrolia. While it cannot be learned just how much oil the well will produce, it is known that there is considerable oil and the gas itself is of great importance as the well extends the proven gas territory over two miles to the westward. The well is now capped and it is believed that it will be drilled deeper unless the oil flow comes on stronger.

At Electra several wells have been completed during the week but no new territory has been developed. A new location has been made near Day Station and a showing of oil was made in the Honaker well. Drilling in nearly all the wild cat wells scattered over this section has progressed very favorably considering the heavy rains. These rains will furnish water for drilling operations at many points where the lack of water was causing a serious handicap

Notes From Electra.
(Electra News)

The big oil companies report they will have six hundred tank men in the Electra field next week. Teams are now busy hauling steel

Another big oil land deal is being markoted two miles east of town. The big noises are now being made east of town and the promising prospects of all the wells east warrant much confidence

The Corsicana Petroleum Company brought in a good well on the Allen lease, just east of the Red River Company's eighty acre tract

Bob Sanders had the misfortune to twist off about one thousand feet of drill pipe in the Culberson well on Woodruff Heights last Saturday night, but was fortunate enough to pick it up Monday and expects to reach the 1900 foot sand in the next few days

Red River No. 11 caught fire Wednesday night about 1 o'clock from drilling into the gas. The time dialers laid asteam line from their boilers to the fire and extinguished the flame in about three hours. The loss was not very heavy.

Woodruff and Putnam No 12 was brought in Sunday and regardless of the number it came in a good one. The location is not out of the proven territory, but is a location on the east side of the lease and means an extension to the lease proper

The Honaker Oil and Gas Company found a nice sand last week about 1500 feet in their well about four miles west of the proven territory a six-inch packer was set and bailing commenced Saturday night, but the packer failed to hold and a new one was ordered and at this writing we have no information as to what the well is showing. The News man was on the derrick Monday morning while the bailer was running and a very nice showing of oil and gas was seen considering the fact that the hole was nearly full of mud and water. We were very much impressed with the showing and look for a well to be developed.

Benedum and Trees Plans.
(Lawton Star News)

That responsible firms think well of the oil and gas prospects of this section is again confirmed by the arrival at Abpentone of the tools and engine of the Steel City Oil and Gas Company of Pittsburg, Pa. It is generally known that this is a company of magnitude largely interested in other fields of the country and when its representatives enter a field that field is not abandoned until it is thoroughly demonstrated that oil and gas does not exist in quantities that warrant further development. The company's representatives thoroughly investigate a field, however, before entering it for development. Mr Paul Trees and Mr M. L. Cloris have been in this vicinity practically all summer invetsigating the field and securing the leases

Notwithstanding the fact that the first step taken by these gentlemen was to visit the banks of the city and give the most satisfactory reference considerable difficulty was experienced in securing the number of leases required by the company before it will enter a field. As is known the farmers of late have been reluctant to part with leases on account of previous experiences with speculators. However the Steel City people are now in possession of leases to the amount of 14,000 acres

As stated above the tools are all on the ground, as is the engine. The derrick is enroute and will arrive within the next few days, as will the casing. The contractor is here with his men and no time will be lost after the arrival of the balance of the equipment. There will be no cessation of work after it is once started. Two shifts will operate, working twelve hours each.

When it is known that the principal stockholders in the Steel City company are Benedum and Trees, the multi-millionaire oil men, the public will take due notice of the fact that real oil men are in the territory, the Benedum and Trees Oil Company have the largest holdings of any independent oil company in the United States and have opened up some of this country's largest fields, among them the Illinois field and the Caddo fields, in Louisiana.

Advices were received at Devol, Okla. this week that E. A Hill, the Davis, Okla., oil man, had closed a contract with an experienced driller to drill a test on the 6000 acre lease around Devol. It is expected the rig will arrive at Devol within the next ten days

Anson H Russell, an oil operator of Cleveland, Ohio, joined the colony of oil men at the Westland yesterday and is seeking some oil properties for a party of Eastern capitalists. He will go over the field the first of next week.

Promote Company to Drill Near Quanah.

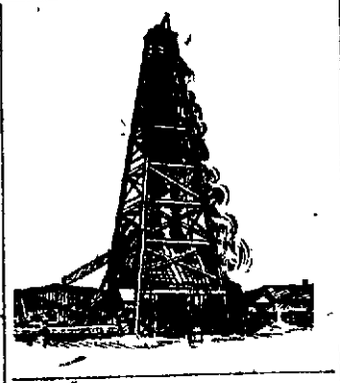
Last night a number of Quanah people had a meeting and bought from J C Marshall 136 3-10 acres of land situated just beyond the feed lots north of the city, and decided to plat same into lots 50x140 feet with streets and alleys

The meeting resolved itself into the Hardeman County Deep Well Company an unincorporated organization, which will soon be succeeded by a regular incorporated company which will undertake the sale of the lots, the proceeds from which will be used for drilling deep wells with the purpose of finding petroleum, gas or water, either of which, if in commercial quantities, will precipitate new life into this community

It has been predicted by professional oil men that the section where the property is located is oil bearing, and that a prospect well will develop that fact.—Quanah Observer

The Fort Worth and Denver's receipts at Electra during November are reported to have been $114,000. This was probably the biggest business done by any station on the Fort Worth and Denver.

W. M Stephenson, the Batson,



Texas oil man who has been at Grandfield, Okla., for several months, left a few days ago to spend the holidays at home. He state dthat he would return early in January with a drilling outfit. His first operations will be between Randlett and Red River.

The Grandfield Oil and Gas Company recently organized, is still taking leases about Grandfield. Officials of the company say it has money in the bank to pay for drilling a well and that work will start as soon as the necessary leases have been secured.

Drilling has been resumed on the deep well at Altus after having been abandoned at a depth of fifteen hundred feet. Mr. Nichols, the driller is hopeful of finding oil.

LORENE BARKLEO TELLS HER STORY

WIFE OF S LAIN MAN REVIEWS FIRST MEETING WITH HUSBAND, THE COURTSHIP AND BRIEF BUT HAPPY MARRIED LIFE.

HER FORTITUDE BREAKS

Girl Widow Bursts Into Tears When She Tells of Finding Shot Ridden Body.

Special to the Times

Lawton, Okla., Dec 17.—While the two hundred court attendants listened in strained silence, Lorene Barkleo, girl-widow of Jesse Barkelo, Thursday told the story of her entire life since the age of remembrance, her first meeting with deceased husband, the courtship and the brief but happy married life. Decidedly pretty and dressed in deepest mourning this young girl whose life has been shadowed by the greatest tragedy which could destroy a happy home, spoke calmly and bravely of events which led to the slaying of the man whom she had chosen to share her life. Not once was her fortitude broken until she was led to speak of the finding of the shot ridden body of her young husband when she broke entirely down and wept unrestrainedly for several minutes. It was, possibly, the most dramatic period which will be developed during this hard fought trial. Almost every eye in the court room was diffused with the tear of sympathy, many of the women weeping audibly. Tears trickled down the cheeks of a number of the jurymen, when with the words "I found him dead" the girl-widow broke into passionate weeping

Lorene Barkleo, in brief told the story of ehr life. How she had lived with her family at Charlie, Texas, until 12 years of age when the family moved to their present home. How she had always done any and every kind of work there was to be done. Picked cotton in the fields and plowed since the age of seven years. That she had never gone to school although school houses had always been near her home because her father and mother did not wish her to go. Had only visited a school once or twice in her lifetime. Had seen but little of the social side of life for the reason that her parents would not allow it. When she did go out a member of the family had accompanied her. She had never been allowed to have a beau. She was 16 years of age the 8th of last July.

She told the story in detail of her love, courtship and marriage, from the time she had first seen Barkelo when he came to play cards at the Gallant home. How he came there to work and they were thrown together in the home and the fields. How they learned to love each other and jealously guarded the secret because they knew their marriage would not be considered by her parent. How the elopment was planned and carried out, their driving to a minister's home and being wed at 5 o'clock in the morning. Also of signing her father's name to the order for a license.

The elopment took place on the night of the 9th day of August. When asked why she had said nothing to her parents about her contemplated marriage she said that she knew they would never permit it—that they had said that girls should never marry before they were 30 years of age, and would be better off then if they stayed at home.

When asked as to the dress she wore to be married in she replied that she wore the best she had, a five-cent lawn dress. She told of the future movements of herself and husband, how they drove to the house of the deceased brother and remained there until the 21st of December, stayed at Joiners four months where they picked cotton side by side in the fields returning to Comanche county, Jan. 1st. Had seen her folks a few times. How her folks came to the Daniels house where they were staying and tried to get her to go home. Said they tried to make her go but she would not go with them. Jesse Fletcher was with them. They finally, after working with neighbors, went to housekeeping on the Will Cornelus place where the tragedy occurred.

She said Jesse Barkelo had always treated her well and provided well for her. That he was much better to her than Jesse Fletcher had ever been.

How herself and husband had planned to go to the home of his mother on the 10th day of July. She told of the arrangements made to get a leave and said she had gone to the Gallant home to get a dress. Jesse Fletcher was there and had asked her when she was going away and she told him "about noon" and he then replied "O, so soon?" Had later seen him going across the field—had a blue shirt on. Later saw J P. Cornelius coming from the east with his mules in a lope. He told her that her husband had been killed, that Fletcher had killed him. She begged him to take her to her husband but he said he must go and phone for officers but she could take the team. She attempted to do so but was prevented by her sister, who held her, and by her mother who held the heads of the mules. She finally started on a run for home.

While running across the field she passed within 30 or 40 feet of Jesse Fletcher and he said "You needn't go down there I have killed him and his brains are on the ground." She ran down there and found her husband's body lying on the ground. His body was taken in the Cornelius home and from there to Temple. He was burried northeast of Comanche.

Rigid cross examination failed to shake the witness in material points in her story as told. She stated she could read and write that she had learned partly by herself and her sister had helped her. Insisted parents would not send her to school. Had sometimes said they would place her in a convent. Had visited several people a number of times and drove her sister's pony. Father was superintendent of Sunday school and, she sometimes went with him. Played cards quite frequently at home. Did not mean anything worng when she signed her father's name to the order for a license. Yes, supposed her father lover her.

The testimony of Mrs. Gallant, mother of Loren, was just opposite to that of Loerne. She said they had tried many times to get Lorene to go to school but that she would not go. Did not like to study. That they were always good to her and that she was only whipped a few times when she was young. That her father always got her anything she wanted. That they had purchased a piano for her fifteenth birthday, but it was late in coming and after Lorene had married they did not desire it. That she was allowed to go to places and they had never told her she could not marry until she was thirty. That is almost killed them all when Lorene eloped.

The Brotherhood of Railway Clerks has appointed a committee to select a suitable site near Cleveland for a large brotherhood farm, where the unemployed and the aged members of the brotherhood may have a home and at the asme time earn their living by farm work.

"Taking the Cure"

Christmas—meaning in this instance not merely the day, but the whole holiday season,—marks, literally as well as figuratively, the culmination of the year's activities of the American Red Cross. Rather odd, is it not? It seems natural enough that the interval in December that rounds out the twelve months should be the busiest of the whole period for shop keepers and store clerks and delivery men and letter carries and all the others in our national community whose services are essential to the conduct of the annual merrymaking. But no person who had not looked into the matter would be expected to guess that the yule-tide is a time of high tension at the headquarters and branch offices of the great humanitarian organization.

The experience of the past few years would seem to warrant the assertion that the Christmas prelude is actually the busiest season of the year with the Red Cross. Perhaps that is too strong a statement to make unqualifiedly, however, for the Red Cross in the role of a good samaritan ever ready to rush to the aid of the needy in any part of the world can never predict what season of the year will bring it the heaviest responsibilities. Famine, floods, hurricanes, warfare and pestilence are destructive agents that seldom give warning of their coming. Yet to undo their havoc is a task which this great humanitarian organization must undertake at a moment's notice. But, even with an eye to the unexpected, it may be said that under normal conditions and in so far as routine work is concerned Christmas is a time of top speed in Red Cross activities.

First and foremost of the causes of the bustle of the Red Cross Christmas is that familiar bright-hued token, the Christmas Seal. It seems a small object to call so much energy into play. Individually the Christmas Seal is a sticker no larger than a postage stamp. Indeed they called them Red Cross Christmas Stamps at first and until some folks got the idea they could be used in payment of postage for carrying letters through the mails. But insignificant as these bits of gummed paper are individually they are mighty formidable collectively. The mere selling of them at a penny apiece is a task that enlists the efforts of thousands of the country,—most of them volunteer sales folk. And how great a chore is the distribution of the little souvenirs and the keeping tab on sales may be imagined from the fact that the Red Cross last Christmas sold thirty-one millions of the diminutive greetings for which the American people paid an aggregate of $310,000.

Probably every one of our readers well remember when the Red Cross took on the role of a Christmas merchant, for it was only a few years ago that the Red Cross Christmas stamp first made its appearance. Most people who paste these gaudy dwarf mottoes on their Xmas letters and packages look upon the idea as an American innovation. It seems, however, that something of the same scheme was tried in Europe quite a while ago,—in the little kingdom of Denmark to be exact. Jacob Riis, who has done so much for the betterment of conditions among the poor of New York City, gets credit for having imported the idea to this country, and the Red Cross took it up and developed it as it had never been done in Europe in all the years they had the plan before we tokk hold of it.

What a large part this pretty Christmas custom fostered by the Red Cross has come to play in the lives of the people of the United States was eloquently attested by the avalanche of protests that poured into Washington a few weeks ago when it was erroneously reported that the Postmaster-General was going to put a ban on the Santa Claus seals. The only basis for the rumor was an official edict that the stickers must be placed on the backs of envelopes and not on the address side. It had been found that when the public had free rein to place the Christmas seals anywhere it chose—even in the upper right-hand corner that is supposedly reserved for the regular postage stamp, confusion was certain to result and consequently it was decided that the Red Cross stamps and Uncle Sam's stamps must not be allowed in closer proxmity than opposite sides of the envelope.

And, speaking of the hold of the Christmas seals upon ye sentimentalists at yule-tide it may as well be confessed that the Red Cross officials themselves rather expected that the use of the stickers would prove a fad in which public interest might subside after a year. In reality this has not proven the case and if anything enthusiasm seems to increase rather than diminish. When those in charge of laying in a stock of Christmas seals for the holiday season of 1911 received reports from the agents throughout the country who attend to the marketing of the tiny trophies they found that to supply all the prospectiyé vendors from Maine to California would require not less than fifty millions of the seals and accordinly that has been made a "first order" with a strong possibility that it will have to be increased later.

Every year a new design is selected for the Christmas stamps—some of the country's leading artists having donated sketches for such use—and the one for the holidays of 1911 is easily one of the handsomest that has yet appeared. The stamp is resplendent in red and green, the Christmas colors, and has the main portions of a red-rimmed circle devoted to a wintry landscape with evergreen trees and a snow covered cottage from the windows of which come ruddy gleams. In the sky is a conspicuous red cross while below in green are the words Merry Christmas and Happy New Year together with the date. This year's sticker is, in effect, essentially a seal rather than a stamp although the circular design one inch in diameter is printed on a white ground and the perforations divide these into squares just as in the case with postage or other stamps.

One of the interesting features of the present Red Cross Christmas is that the great organization of which President Taft is the head has this year adopted a new plan of disposing of the Christmas seals. Of course everybody understands that the Red Cross does not make any profit, in the ordinary sense of the term, from its Christmas enterprise. All the income, aside from the actual expense of printing and distributing the stamps, is devoted to the cause of humanity and so conscientious is the Red Cross in these matters that whereas at the outset it required 20 per cent of the gross receipts for these necessary expenses, there have been devised economies that now enable the conduct of the enterprise with an outlay of only 12 1-2 per cent.

The idea of the Christmas campaign ever since it was inaugurated has not been merely raise general Red Cross funds—money that would be poured into the common fund to relieve distress wherever found in the wake of disaster. On the contrary the especial object of this fanciful Christmas charity has all along been to raise money for the fight against the "white plague" and as a matter of fact all of the receipts from the sale of stamps, except the 12 1-2 per cent needed for printing, transportation and other expenses, has been devoted to anti-tuberculosis work throughout the country—each section or community benefiting directly in proportion to the volume of stamp sales in it sown locality.

The Red Cross has since it took up this Christmas merchandising, been doing much of its anti-tuberculosis work through the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, there being many "fresh air camps" and like institutions throughout the country that have been wholly dependent upon the outpouring of pennies at Christmas for their upkeep. This alliance has now led the Red Cross to put into practice a new policy with reference to the Christmas sale of 1911. It has been nothing less than the transfer to the Tuberculosis Association above mentioned of all the details of the Christmas Seal campaign. The Red Cross will continue to fix the general policies to be followed in the Christmas project; will decide upon the chaarcter and quantity of Christmas seals to be printed and will exercise a general supervision over all the work of placing the good will messengers in the hands of the people, but the other organization will appoint the agents in every town and city up and down the land and will carry on the voluminous correspondence with these representatives incident to the sale of stickers that is in progress throughout the entire month of December.

No mention of the Red Cross Christmas, or at least the Red Cross Christmas of 1911, would be complete without mention of the very valuable Christmas present which the Red Cross is making to the whole American people. This gift is what is known as a First Aid Car and its function is to travel up and down the railroads of the country (the railroad companies generously transport it free of charge) stopping at towns and cities enroute to instruct volunteer Red Cross workers in "first aid" work. It might be termed a missionary car and its advent seems especially appropriate at this season of universal good will, for it will be the instrument of rendering efficient a corps of industrial workers who will have the knowledge to extend emergency relief measures to their fellow toilers in time of mishap. The Red Cross has had one of these First Aid cars for nearly a year now and it has been steadily employed in giving instructions in first aid to the employees of various railroad systems. The second car that is now provided will make it possible to arrange this work on a better basis, one car traversing the territory east of the Mississippi River and the other performing a like service west of the Mississippi.

While on the subject of the railroad work of the Red Cross it may not be amiss to mention that an admirer of the present President of the United States has turned over to the Red Cross the sum of $5,000 which he desires shall be known as the William Howard Taft Fund. The income from this newly-created fund (which might be characterized as yet another Christmas present) is to be paid in prizes each year to the railroad employees who perform first aid work requiring skill and coolness of an unusual character. Four annual prizes have already been established, spectively $50, $25, $15, and $10.

The Red Cross Christmas has been the means of heightening the holiday pleasure of a large number of young people in every State and Territory. Reference is not made to the legion who derive a sense of satisfaction from the purchase of the stamps, knowing that they are doing a good deed thereby, but rather to the young women and children who give their services free of charge for the sale of the Christmas stamps on the streets and in the stores of hundreds of towns and cities.

The little folks who essay the sale of Red Cross stamps on the streets are liable to have a chilly task in many localities, but tha custom is rather discouraged now in favor of the better one of selling the stamps at specially-arranged booths in stores, at church fairs, in hotels and in short, wherever the buying public congregates. Of course the logical place for a Christmas stamp booth is in the postoffice whence come the gift-givers to mail their presents. In most towns and cities where space will permit the postmasters have been very good about allowing the Red Cross representatives to have space near the letter and package drops and when the vendors are fortified in such position he must be indeed a stony-hearted individual who can run the gauntlet with his parcels and emerge without a sprinkling of the seals of unselfishness. The postal authorities of some of the foreign governments notably our testy friend, John Bull did not take kindly at first to the idea of the Red Cross Christmas tokens when attached to letters sent abroad, but most of them ahve somewhat modified their opposition.

Doll Mannequins that set the Modes in Shop Windows

PERHAPS the most interesting dollies in the world are the dainty little figurines, togged out in accordance with Madam Mode's latest mandate, which some of the large dry goods shops exhibit in their show windows. About two years ago the first of these tiny ladies of fashion began to make an appearance in America in a very exclusive shop on Fifth avenue. Now they are to be seen in several places and every now and then the small mannequins disappear, to be replaced with others more up-to-the-minute in costume.

These wonderful dollies are made by an artist's wife over in Germany, and though there have been many attems tp copy the doll fashion plates, nobody seems able to give the same likelike touch, the same grace and action, the same indefinable chic and style and dash that this German lady puts into each tiny figure. The little doll people seem to be really alive—to possess personality and each is as graceful and as distinguished as a well bred mondaine dressed by a famou conturier.

The dolls are about six inches high; some of them reaching up to eight inch height, the child dolls of course being proportionately smaller. They stand on round velvet cushions and may be used for pincushions if desired; though not all the shops which display them will sell them for this purpose. Every detail of the costume is exquisitely correct; for example note the gaiter-top boots on the little lady who has a child by the hand. These new gaiter boots are the craze in Paris now. The buttoned gaiter top of suede or cloth in some delicate shade is attached directly to a potent leather vamp; but the dolls' feet are usually made of wood through which passes the wire which forms the foundation for the supple figure.

It is this wire foundation that makes the tiny figure so supple and pliable though consummate art is employed to bend the wires exactly right to produce the natural poses. The skating girls are really skating, you will observe and the mother and child are strolling along in leisurely fashion.

Over the "bony structure" of wires cotton batting is wound, body and limbs being carefully modeled in lifelike fashion and no pains are spared to have the costumes modishly perfect. The smart suit worn by the young mother, for instance, has a cutaway coat and tunic of black satin meteor over a skirt of white cloth, the coat having exaggerated white satin revers and cuffs of the white cloth. Coat and tunic are lined with the white satin. The hat with its aigrette trimming is a masterpiece of chic and reticule and parasol, carried and worn to accentuate an oblique line across the costume, are decidedly knowing in effect. The little girl wears the last cry in satin coats, with a trimming of corded puffing, and her hat is a becoming bonnet of draped straw with satin roses in pastel shades at one side. The hands and feet of the little figures are the only crude parts, but so cleverly are these members manipulated that they do not spoil the effect of the perfect grace and distinction of costume.

The skating girls are dressed for winter weather, and though the photograph does not show it, their costumes form a delicate color harmony. In fact the artistic combination of colors is a feature of this artist's work. One finds no harsh contrasts, no strong primary reds, yellows or blues, no loud pinks or screaming greens; but lovely, subtle tones of taupe, mauve, catawba, olive, pasl canary, dashing flame and coral hues and soft French and Dutch blues, exactly like the fashionable shades in real costumes.

One of the skating girls wears a velvet suit of tobacco brown—just now a very modish shade—with trimming of dark fur and a fur muff to match. Her toque is also of the brown velvet with a band of gold lace and a shaded quill of split ostrich. Her reticule is of mustard brown faille with gold lace and a gold cord handle. He rlittle compaion wears a tailored suit of green mixed wool fabric with a cut-away coat showing a vest of pale corn-colored faille. Her furs are fawny gray, like Australian opposume, and her hat is of green-gold not with a feather made of chenille in green and yellow shades. She carries a reticule of white velvet beaded with green and gold.

If you consider the making of such doll mannequins a childish and frivolous occupation, just try some day, to wrap bits of cotton over wire hairpins, for instance, and then to make the wires take the lifelike and artistic poses of these tiny figurines. Then, if you will, endeavor to design, cut and make garments tiny enough to cover your tiny mannequin, and make them take when on the chic and distinguished lines of the dolls made by the little German lady who originated the idea of the doll fashion plates. You will admit that a deal of skill and art craft goes into the fashioning, not only of the lifelike little figures, but the Parisian costumes as well.

W. of drilling well, within 2 miles of Benson producing well, at 931 foot sand and South West about 3 miles of 15000 barrels daily production. $75.00 an acre is being paid for the lease alone on 320 acres cornering these tracts on the Southwest. Electra Oil Fields

Within 8 months has become the centre of vast financial consideration and investments already and dependent involve millions of dollars. The Guffey Co. is erecting a refinery at Fort Worth; Pierce-Fordyce Ass'n erecting a refinery at Fort Worth also. The Texas Co. also the Magnolia Petroleum Co. as well as above mentioned concerns are building pipe lines from Dallas, Fort Worth and Corsicana into Electra.

"The "Oil Field Journal" of Nov. 30th details over 60 rigs, drilling and derricks at Electra since augmented probably 20 per cent. The same journal credits the field with 12,000 barrels daily output but other wells coming in since then have increased the production to almost 15,000 daily barrels.

The Magnolia Petroleum Company has 17 tanks in and ordered for its present tank farm. They have ordered 10 more tanks to erect on another farm purchased by them.

The Pierce-Fordyce Association has purchased land south and east of Electra on the Fort Worth and Denver Railroad for a tank farm and shipping site and are shipping oil and erecting tanks.

The purchase by them of 100,000 barrels alone from the Producers Oil Company puts them in business at once.

The Texas Company is building an 8 inch line from Electra to Dallas connecting with their refinery at the latter point. The Magnolia Petroleum Co., is going to pipe from Electra to Corsicana.

A 120 acre lease in section 11 was taken over for $12,000.00 cash; also $24,000.00 or $75.00 an acre in cash lies in an Electra bank to be paid the owners for a lease on 320 acres land in section 10, this lies just south of Flanagen & Russell lease. The land in this vicinity is held in large blocks which prohibits the speculator of small means to even get a chance to later annex comfortable little fortunes from a small investment which was had by some prior to developments in other sections of the field in earlier days. For instance one party recently sold 4½ acres in fee for $1750.00 an acre, he paid $300.00 an acre and the fellow that sold at that price had originally paid $25.00 an acre. The parties owning it have an oil well thereon, and they have a good thing. This land was at time of the $300.00 sale over a mile from the field. Some Electra people cut up 40 acres, 1½ miles east of the city limits, in lots 40x150 feet and readily disposed of them at $150.00 each. Small acreage such as 5 or 10 acres, as in former fields can not be obtained here. The spirit and money is in this field to take anything offered because they know and realize the present and future magnitude of this field. It is not so much a question of selling as getting stuff offered. 54 oil lots 40x150 feet in Electra that was put on the market Sept. 20th, at $200.00 each was wholly taken and paid for inside of 24 hours. $500.00 each has since been refused, so it goes and that doesn't seem to be all. A confirmed conviction exists among the old fellows in the game that the blow off and boom has not arrived. This is not openly admitted but the big money is going in every day just the same.—Wichita Daily Times, Dec. 9th, 1911."

LEAN CHRISTMAS FOR WALL STREET

"The Street" Crowd Not Looking Forward to Holiday With Customary Joyful Anticipation.

New York, Dec. 17.—Wall street employes, from the six dollar a week office boy to the office managers wth salaries reaching five figures a year, are not looking forward to Christmas this year with their customary joyful anticipation. It has been a lean year a very lean year for the street, and as a consequence the word has gone out that it will be a pitifully emaciated Santa Claus that will go around distributing the Christmas and end of the year bonuses during the next two weeks The year has been a poor one for the brokers from the very start and the recent slump was scarcely necessary to aid the glooms in giving the joys the final knockout punch.

The clerical forces of the the great stock exchange houses will be the chief sufferers from the falling off in the bonus funds. Scarcely any of the large houses will end the year clear for they have experienced a big decrease in business and at the same time have been under as heavy expense in maintaining their private wire systems and branch houses as in the "fat" years.

The bank employes probably will fare much better this year than the brokerage forces, though this condition usually is reversed when the stock exchange firms are prosperous. The men back of the big banks are all possessed of great wealth and they argue that it would be poor policy to make their employes suffer for the smaller returns of the past twelve months. Several of the great banking houses make it a rule to give their managers and clerks fifty per cent of their salaries at the end of the year, and ten and even twenty-five per cent distributions are not uncommon. It is not believed, however, that any firm will give 100 per cent bonuses this year, as was done by several houses in 1901.

Roosevelt on the M'namara Case

By Associated Press

New York, Dec 17—Theodore Roosevelt has an editorial article in the current issue of The Outlook relating to the McNamara case, entitled "Murder is Murder" The article says

'Not only laboring men, but business men, capitalists, have at times shown the worst form of class consciousness—that of sinister and brutal class selfishness in standing by criminals simply because they were of their own class This has been done by capitalists in the case of capitalists who have been guilty of brazen corruption and by laborers in the case of labor leaders who have been guilty of murderous violence The two offenses stand on a par from the standpoint of damage to the community In San Francisco in one municipal contest the capitalists who desired to be free from all check on corruption and the labor leaders who desired to be free from all check on lawless violence struck hands and elected their ticket and this proved in the end to be a lasting misfortune to San Francisco to the cause of honest business and to the cause of honest labor

"Since the startling outcome of the McNamara trial certain apologists of these men have made themselves conspicuous by asserting that these depraved criminals who have on their seared souls the murder of so many innocent persons—all of them laboring people, by the way—are victims or at worst fanatics who should receive sympathy because they were acting in what they regarded as a war on behalf of their class The plea is monstrous in its folly and its wickedness It is precisely the kind of plea sometimes advanced on behalf of a crooked man of great wealth caught bribing a legislature—that he has to do it to protect his business We are not here dealing with any of the kinds of offenses incidental to the sudden and sweeping changes brought about by modern industrial conditions into which capitalists or labor men are sometimes drawn without any very great conscious moral turpitude on their part We are dealing with crimes as old as the law giving from Sinai, with crimes—murder and theft—that have been prohibited ever since the decalogue was formulated The murders committed by men like the McNamaras, although nominally in the interest of organized albor differ not one whit in moral culpability from those committed by the Black Hand, or by any band of mere cutthroats, and are fraught with an infinitely heavier menace to society Yet, great though the menace is to the community the menace to the cause of honest organized labor is still greater, and no duty is more imperatively laid on the leaders of labor than the duty of affirmatively freeing themselves and their followers from the taint of responsibility for such criminals and such crimes The labor leaders who by their loud championship of the McNamaras—as previously of Meyer and Haywood—have succeeded in identifying them with the cause of labor in the eyes of the public have rendered an evil service to that cause Mr Debs and the extremists of his type among the so-called political Socialists—I say so-called because Debs and his followers of the Emma Goldman kind are not Socialists at all in any true sense of the word, but mere inciters to murder and preachers of applied anarchy—and the labor leaders affiliated with them have always boasted of the part they played in the trial of Meyer and Haywood, and in this case they repeated their familiar tactics and held mass meetings and scattered broadcast papers and addresses in which they furiously denounced the effort to bring wrongdoers to justice and sought to arouse every evil class instinct against all who upheld the cause of law or sought to put a stop to assassination and murderous violence It is worth noting that since McNamara confessed his guilt Mr Meyer the head of what purports to be a labor organization is reported in the press as commenting upon it, not by denouncing McNamara for having committed the murder, but by denouncing him for having confessed it. Such denunciation is significant

Murder is murder, and the foolish sentimentalists or sinister wrongdoers who try to apologize for it as an incident of labor warfare are not only morally culpable but are enemies of the American people and above all are enemies of American wage workers In honorable contrast to these men stand the various labor leaders who have never asked for more than a fair trial for the McNamaras whose purpose has only been to get justice, and who now sternly demand that murder shall be punished when committed in the nominal interest of labor precisely as under any other circumstances I believe with all my heart in the American workingman. I believe with all my heart in organized labor for labor must be organized in order to protect and secure its rights and therefore with all my strength I urge my fellow citizens the American men and women who earn their livelihood as wage-workers to see that their leaders stand for honesty and obedience to the law and to set their faces like flint against any effort to identify the cause of organized labor, directly or indirectly with any movement which in any shape or way benefits by the commission of crimes of lawless and murderous violence '

COTTON SEED DETERIORATES

TWO SUCESSIVE DRY YEARS HAVE RESULTED IN LOWERING OF VITALITY AND DEPRECIATION OF QUALITY.

GOOD SEED ESSENTIAL

D P Talley, of Wichita Cotton Oil Mill Heading Movement to Secure Better Seed

D P Talley, secretary and general manager of the Wichita Cotton Oil Company is urging the mill men gin men, farmers and business men in general in this section to secure good cotton seed for the crop to be planted next spring Mr Talley believes and this belief is shared by all who know anything about cotton growing that as the result of the two consecutive dry years the seed grown here was greatly deteriorated both in vitality and in quality and that unless this seed is replaced by good vital seed the crop next year will plainly show the result Mr Talley has had reprinted and has sent broadcast throughout this section an address delivered by R L Bennett of the U S Department of Agriculture relative to the selection and planting of cotton seed accompanying this he has sent a letter which says in part

From the information I have the yield of cotton per acre within a radius of about 30 miles of Wichita Falls south of Red River is the poorest in the United States While this years drouth rendered it impossible for this section to produce a good yield yet investigation will show you that in some sections where the drouth was just as severe as here, but where attention is paid by farmers to pure seed selection their yield per acre is very much better than in this section In some sections the Boards of Trade Banks Merchants, Oil Mills and Gins combine in a campaign of education and even offer inducements to farmers, in their efforts to bring about the planting of selected seed from good crop selections Many authorities throughout the country advocate the change of seed every few years even on farms where fairly good crops were raised If that is advisable, then, how very much more important is it that none of the seed produced in this section this year be put back into the ground I use the word important—the fact is I consider it necessary that this entire section import some first class seed for planting if we are to increase miserable yield this year I believe that the seed raised around here this year will not produce a good crop even though we should have ideal weather conditions next spring and summer We have been working every variety of this seed at our mill for the past seven weeks and I can say truly that they are the poorest quality I have handled at any time in my 16 years in the business, both from a planting and an oil milling standpoint

"To leave the securing of such seed to the individual farmer means that very few will get them as they do not know where to locate them and to buy in less than car lots means an added extra expense in local freight By co-operation of all concerned a carload or more could be purchased for each community by some designated party and these handled in each town by designated agencies I think that all interested parties in each town should co-operate in inducing the farmers to not plant the poor seed they have but to trade them to these designated agencies on some liberal basis, paying the small difference in cash

It should not be expected that the gins and the oil mill shoulder the whole burden of securing and distributing the seed necessary to be shipped to the several towns in this section Farmers bankers merchants and land owners are more vitally interested in a cotton crop than the combined gins and mills in fact the prosperity of the community as a whole is largely affected by a poor cotton crop This year the gins are less able to handle such an undertaking than any other of our business concerns because the present short crop will leave few of the gins any profit in operating and many of them will close the season with a loss, hence they simply are not in financial position to do so, and particularly not in position to carry any accounts Neither should this be left entirely to the oil mill since the value of the seed out of a cotton crop is from one-seventh to not exceeding one-third less than that of the lint cotton which means that other lines of business are affected from three to seven times more than the oil mill If the farmer fails the merchants collections will be bad and if the merchants collections are bad the banks will likely have to carry the load Following this years general crop failure the average farmer may not feel able to pay for such seed though if possible for him to do so it would be one of the very best investments he could make We shall be glad and are anxious to do our full part in this matter and are willing to take part in a plan by which the farmer can exchange the poor seed he has for good seed on a liberal basis any small difference to be paid or the bank or merchant with whom he has an account to so arrange for him '

Mr Talley then goes on to state that his mill was recently offered from one to fifteen carloads of guaranteed selected seed put up in sacks of about three bushels each, in carload lots at 75 to 80 cents per bushel and says

"Now, in the absence of any better plan suggested by you for your town, I suggest as what seems to me a fair plan, that we will without expense to anyone do the buying of the selected seed, have one carload shipped to each gin, the bank with whom that gin does business to pay for the carload and charge to the account of the gin with the understanding that the gin will sell same for cash only or in trade for other seed and as such sales or trades are made will deposit the proceeds against that charge and if all the seed have not been sold by next fall we will help the gin take the seed and settel the account against same with the bank Where the farmer cannot pay cash, or cannot pay in cash the difference where he trades other seed, then some merchant, landlord or banker in the town with whom the farmer carries an account will pay this for him We will arrange with the gin to trade this good seed for the poor seed on what we consider a most liberal basis and although these trades will extend far past our operating season we will still take the poor seed and pay for them and we will also arrange with the gin on a satisfactory basis to help take up the good seed next fall, if necessary

Both show windows of our hardware department have the finest seasonable goods displayed at special bargain prices and shrewd buyers will find useful articles that can be bought at greatly reduced prices during these special sales

Wonderful FUR WRAPS Worn at the OPERA

This Mink Coat Comes from Martial Armand

An Elaborate Combination of Ermine and Seal - Revillon

A Beautiful Ermine and Red Fox Combination

A Worth Model Full of Worth Distinction

A Stately Sealskin Wrap by Callot

New Furs Drape as Softly as Velvet—Lace Combined with Fur in Delicate and Beautiful Effect—Touches of Metallic Lace Add Rich Glints of Color

STREET costumes more or less presentable in character are the common lot of all but only into the occasional existence does fall the thousand dollar fur evening coat. And yet standing as an observer, in the foyer of the Opera House as the richly dressed folk came through the swinging doors which open from the corridor of the boxes one is impressed with the number of superb fur wraps worn by the women Ermine, moleskin sealskin white coney with fox trimmings chinchilla mink—all are present not in moderately large neckpieces and muffs but in wonderful full length wraps which often trail on the floor over the satin and lace skirts of their wearers And these gorgeous fur wraps mind you are—by the nature of their design—intended only for evening use and would be entirely out of place in the assemblage where daylight costumes are worn [illegible] or in who owns such a wrap [illegible] in all probability another coat of sealskin Persian lamb or mink for limousine wear over afternoon frocks and very likely a motor coat of muskrat otter or leopard also

Such wraps [illegible] only for the multimillionaires womenfolk. When the choice lies between a motor car for [illegible] families and an entire evening wrap for [illegible] between a single little house [illegible] for the entire family [illegible] seal and sable opera coat for [illegible] of the family the choice is not apt to consider merely the [illegible] of milady An ermine evening wrap represents money and lots of [illegible] is one of the most luxurious garments a woman can own and [illegible] the prosperous condition [illegible] financial affairs even more [illegible] than would diamonds which [illegible] last for years after an [illegible] has been outworn and [illegible] for evening wraps there [illegible] seem to be the most important [illegible] luxurious part of the sartorial [illegible] play in the foyer and corridors [illegible] great Opera House in New York [illegible] fashionable night

For there are nights and nights the Opera House and on Wednesdays and Fridays one may be certain seeing the elect of the smart set in their boxes in the famous diamond horseshoe and the grand tier of boxes above filled with folk frocked coiffed and jeweled with equal brilliance Full dress is worn all through the house on these evenings from the orchestra [illegible] the dress circle and even in the balconies above one encounters decollete frocks handsome evening [illegible] masculine dress suits sprinkled among ordinary street attire [illegible] above there the real music enthusiasts [illegible] and the folk who even if they [illegible] the several dollars to pay for a [illegible] do not possess the raiment to [illegible] one may listen to entrancing [illegible] and million dollar voices in shabby [illegible] or pack intosh if one so desires but even the strongest opera glass will scarcely reveal to ones eyes a glimpse of the diamonds, the laces the satins and brocades and furs far below

Most of the Fur Evening Coats Come From Paris

Each French couturier puts out his special model in a luxurious fur evening wrap and many of these wraps touch the five thousand dollar mark when custom duties have been included in this country One of the most expensive and most beautiful coats worn at the opening performance of Aida on November 13th was a white tailless ermine made with a huge cape of the fur which fell to the waistline This cape and the bottom of the coat were bordered with a fringe of sable tails and as the trapping of sables has been prohibited in Russia for three years the cost of this fringe of tails alone may well be imagined Above the sable tails on the bottom of the coat was a twelve inch band of the ermine trimmed with the small black ermine tails which are always so effective on the snowy fur White coney is something like the tailless ermine though of course the pelt is not as pure white or as rich and thick in texture with the wonderful suppleness of ermine The coney is less expensive and many women have coats of coney with trimmings of ermine tails or white fox

Paul Poiret is very partial to the striking combination of brilliant red fox fur with pure white ermine and since his taking up of the red fox fur which is really quite an ordinary pelt belonging to humble little Brer Fox of the woods and fields, many furriers have brought out ermine coats trimmed with red fox A beautiful coat in this style designed by Revillon [illegible] illustrated This coat is [illegible] the tailless ermine and has a [illegible] of ermine tails in striped [illegible] at the foot The huge collar [illegible] tuffs of red fox are strikingly [illegible] on the snowy fur but the [illegible] is very splendid and becoming [illegible] wearer whose dark eyes and hair [illegible] enhanced by contrast with the brilliancy of the fur

White Cut Velvet or Ratine Used in Place of Ermine

[illegible] the important French couturiers have produced evening wraps [illegible] the luxurious effect of [illegible] in place of the costly [illegible] ermine or white cut velvet [illegible] in conjunction with [illegible] of some contrasting color [illegible] of this sort created by [illegible] was worn at the Metropolitan Opera House during the premier [illegible] attracted some attention [illegible] was made of pure white cut velvet [illegible] a neck sleeves and foot [illegible] fox From the back of the [illegible] hers as an Austrian officer wear [illegible] gold coat depended a [illegible] which fell on one side to [illegible] sloping down to hip length [illegible] the side This cape was made [illegible] white velvet and at its edge [illegible] fringe of black ermine tails

Another white cut velvet wrap by Bernard has draped sleeves and a stalcent scarf which may be twisted around the throat or even wound about the head and allowed to fall over the wrap Coat draped sleeves and scarf are lined with a splendid shade of emerald green satin and gold chords and tassels hanging from the sleeves add richness to the white and green combination

The Evening Wrap As An Effective Background

At the Horse Show handsome evening wraps thrown over the chair backs made wonderfully effective backgrounds for lively evening frocks whose effect would have been much lessened if their wearers had sat without the wraps in the plain wooden chairs which furnish the boxes When an artist paints a portrait he is very likely to fling a scarf a wrap—or lacking one of these—a bit of rich colored drapery across the back of the sitters chair to throw her figure into artistic relief and form a soft harmonious background for its color tints and delicate texture The woman who appreciates the artistic value of such drapery never leaves her rich wrap in a cloakroom but has it with her over her chair back to add to the luxurious effect of her toilette and enhance tenfold the loveliness of her frock The silk velvet and brocade evening wraps of this winter are Oriental in their richness of color and when the wrap is of fur the lining is apt to be the rich color that the [illegible] lacks

The worth wrap [illegible] sable and broadtail which is [illegible] has a lining of rose and green brocade with bits of gold lace trimming and tiny festoons of ribbon flowers here and there to add dainty elegance The inner side of such a wrap is quite as attractive as the outer and when a dark fur coat is the answer for evening wrap is well as afternoon limousine wrap over bridge costumes of dark satin chiffon or silkiene fabrics a very dainty lining in light coloring will add much to the effectiveness as an evening wrap for the dark fur will be hidden when the wrap is flung over a chair in such manner that the lining forms a background for the silks chiffon or lace frock

The worth [illegible] just referred to is full of the quiet distinction which characterizes all worth costumes One cannot imagine this artist making a feature of ermine and red fox or combining magenta with Elin green in the daring and conspicuous manner of couturiers who strive after sensational effects

Chinchilla a Favorite Fur For Evening Wear

Genuine chinchilla is now quite as expensive as the royal ermine for this pelt is very scarce and hard to get Bechoff David brought out a superb chinchilla evening coat this autumn which was purchased by a young American woman whose marriage was the talk of two continents last spring This lovely chinchilla coat has a cape collar which reaches to the hip in front in pointed revers and falls below the waistline at the back Collar sleeves and lower edge of the coat are trimmed with black lynx The brocade lining is in the palest shade of apricot pink with wreaths of ribbon roses here and there

Rich Furs Combined With Wondrous Fabrics

Many of the French wrap makers prefer to use velvet or brocade in combination with fur considering the color value of such a wrap more important than the rich though neutral tone of fur For instance a Drecoll opera cloak of brocaded blue velvet with a panel of gold lace ten inches across all the way down the back and an enormous shawl collar of chinchilla has ten times the color value of an ermine or chinchilla coat that might cost three times as much though some women prefer the regal luxury of the all fur wrap Another Drecoll evening coat is of ciel blue panne velvet with a huge collar and wide cuffs of Iceland fox—a soft, fluffy fox fur not as rare as the Sitka fox but really very effective for evening use Lace is much used by the French couturiers in combination with fur in these gorgeous evening wraps but the lace is usually of the substantial sort like Russian filet Arabian Venise Milan or the heavy crochet point sometimes called marine A very stunning wrap by Poiret is of white chiffon velvet lined with purple velvet and trimmed with bands of wide Venise lace the white velvet being cut away under the lace to show the purple lining A collar of sable with sable bands on the edge of the sleeve form a costly and effective trimming

A gorgeous French wrap worn at the first performance of Aida last month was of green faille silk with a lining of black satin and trimmings of gold braid gold fringe and skunk fur This wrap was worn by a middle aged woman with white hair exquisitely arranged and a gown of black chantilly over white satin Emeralds swinging from her ears made the beautiful white hair more beautiful still and gave the finishing touch of smartness to the chantilly gown and wrap of green gold and black

Darker Wraps For Afternoon Opera Wear

If you stand in the carriage foyer on a Saturday afternoon after a matinee performance of opera you will see as wonderful furs and fur wraps as an evening performance brings out though the furs will be darker in hue Chinchilla and mink coats are worn over dainty frocks of chiffon and velvet or other fabrics appropriate for afternoon theatre wear These coats are by no means easy to carry about but as their wearers travel to and from the opera in luxurious limousines it does not much matter The Marchal Armand mink coat pictured has a trimming of tails around the lower edge and on the sleeves This coat was worn at the Horse Show over a pretty luncheon frock of taupe chiffon over white satin with touches of flame color and gold on the bodice The sealskin wrap by Callot Soeurs is an especially handsome model the deep cape collar of the sealskin making the coat extra heavy and luxurious

Stray Topics From Little Old New York

New York, Dec. 17.—The steamer General Slocum, 1,028 of whose passengers lost their lives when the old excursion steamer took fire in the East River on June 15, 1904, has at last found a permanent resting place on the bottom of the sea. After the fire the hull of the steamer was purchased by a man named Peter Hagen. The steamer was reconstructed into a barge and given the name Maryland. It was used after that in carrying big loads of coal, coke and other merchandise between different points on the New York and New Jersey shores The old boat seemed to be pursued by ill-luck and many times it came near going to the bottom. On its last trip it was to carry a cargo of coke from Camden to Newark, N. J. It was in tow of a tug, but sprang a leak during a storm and sank in twenty-four feet of water.

Some time ago Dr. Gaetano Samarreill, an Italian physician of this city applied to the courts for the annulment of his marriage on the ground that his wife refused to hug and kiss him even on their honeymoon and persisted in treating him with utter frigidity He had been in hopes that the threat involved in this petition to the courts would soften the heart of his wife, but it did not. She remained as cold as ever and would have nothing to do with him. Then the doctor planned to leave New York believing that under the existing conditions a separation would be the best thing. But, although his wife apparently had no use for him, she seriously objected to his leaving her and she obtained from the Supreme Court an order for the arrest of her husband to prevent him from leaving the State. The doctor recently withdrew his petition for the annulment of his marriage and his wife has now begun a suit for separation on the ground of abandonment.

A short time ago Mrs. Henry Vaughan, a wealthy resident of Orange, N. J., lost a pearl necklace valued at $5000 while on her way to New York City. She advertised her loss in the papers and offered a reward of $1000 for the return of the pearls, but no answer was received. She also notified the police and a detective was sent out to investigate the case. A few days ago the necklace, minus a few of the smaller pearls, was recovered. It seems that an Italian railroad laborer, living in Orange, found the necklace, the chain of which was broken, alongside the railroad track, about a hundred yards from the station at Orange. He did not attach much value to the necklace and when he came home he gave the pearls to his wife, who carelessly put them in the pocket of her kitchen apron, with the remark that she could buy much nicer pearls in the five and ten cent store. She forget all about the pearls and only remembered them when the detective asked her about the baubles.

It seems to be exceedingly hard for women of the stage to give up the glamour of the lime-light and to retire into the obscurity of private life. When an actress or singer has outlived her usefulness as a stage attraction or has abandoned her stage career in exchange for the wealth and social position offered to her by some infatuated millionaire, she rarely is satisfied with her lot. She craves publicity and the lime light and will continue to seek both in any manner which appeals to her. Many of those women seek to attract attention by doing unconventional things, others become involved in scandals and still others write books, or contribute to the columns of the yellow press.

Mrs. William E Corey, the former singer known as Mabelle Gilman, who became the wife of the former Steel Trust President, is the latest to join the ranks of former stage celebrities who resorted to literature as a means of keeping their name before the public Mrs Corey, who spends most of her time in Paris and was at one time reported as contemplating the opening of a new opera house in that city, returned to New York the other day and "confidentially" informed the newspaper reporters who called on her "en masse" that she intended to write a book of advice to young women who propose taking up a dramatic or operatic career No doubt, she could make the book interesting for all if she should choose to do so.

Arrangements to build a theatre to be devoted exclusively to negro plays and negro patronage have been made by a firm called the Johnson Amusement Company, composed of several of the more important of the city's negro residents. Thomas Johnson an employe of Klaw & Erlanger, is president of the corporation named after him It is planned to build the theatre in 138th street, between Fifth avenue and Lenox The cost will be about $165,000. Part of the building which will be on a plot of about 100 feet frontage, will be devoted to lodge and club rooms for negro organizations.

The restoration of free transfers at 151 points in Manhattan and the Bronx was ordered formally the other day by the Public Service Commission. This order of the commission is based upon statistics which conclusively show that the abolition of the transfers has materially reduced the earnings of the street car lines involved. It appears from the figures that approximately 15,000,000 persons who would have paid five cent fares had they been allowed to transfer, preferred walking to paying double fare. It is expected that the street car companies will refuse to obey the order of the Public Service Commission and will allow the matter to be taken into court.

William W. Pike, assistant cashier in one of the banks of this city, undoubtedly has his share of troubles. About nine years ago he married the daughter of a wealthy society woman in Manhattan. His marriage was in many respects a failure, but serious domestic quarrels were avoided with great diplomatic skill His wife's mother was indigant that her daughter was compelled to live in Bayside, far from the club life and the social whirl of gay Manhattan and Mrs. Pike was easily persuaded that her lot was indeed deplorable. As a rule she spent a great deal of her time with her mother, leaving her husband to shift for himself. About a week ago she went on another of her peridoic visits to her mother. A few days ago, when Pike returned to his desolate home he found that his entire household furniture had been removed by his wife to be taken to some place in Manhattan. He tried to prevent the mover taking the things away but as the man had an order from Mrs Pike the court refused to interfere.

STATISTICS ABOUT THE CORN CROP

Special to the Times

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—Statistics relative to the corn crop for the United States collected at the Thirteenth Decennial Census April 15, 1910, are contained in an official statement issued today by Director Durand of the Bureau of Census, Department of Commerce and Labor. The statistics presented cover acreage, production and value for the year 1909 as compared with 1899.

The area of corn harvested increased from 91,913,673 acres in 1899 to 98,383,033 acres in 1909, a gain of 3,496,360 acres or 3.7 per cent. Notwithstanding this expansion in acreage there was a decrease in production which fell from 2,666,324,000 bushels in 1899 to 2,552,190,000 bushels in 1909, a decrease of over 100,000,000 bushels, or 4.3 per cent.

The average production per acre, doubtless by reason of temporary weather conditions, fell from 28.1 bushels to 25.9 On the other hand the value of the corn crop increased enormously from $828,192,000 to $1,438,554,000 a gain of over $600,000,000 or 73.7 per cent The average value of corn per bushel thus advanced from 31 cents to 56 or about 80 per cent.

In Texas 1909 the number of acres shown is 5,130,052 compared with 5,017,690 in 1899, an increase of 112,362 acres, or 2.2 per cent. In Texas as in other States of the Union, there was a large decrease for the decade in production, but an enormous increase in the value of the crop In 1909 75,498,695 bushels were produced as against 109,970,350 bushels in 1899, a decrease of 34,471,655 bushels or 31.3 per cent In 1909 the value was $50,564,618 compared with $34,424,971 in 1899, an increase of $16,139,747 or 46.9 per cent.

SKUNK OIL CURE FOR WHITE PLAGUE

Special to the Times

Lawton, Okla., Dec. 17.—Although John D Rockefeller has retired as active head of the Standard Oil Company, his name as the king of the oil trade will be commemorated in a newly patented cure for consumption and tuberculosis, the concoction, derived from Indian lore, of Tom Lance of Lawton.

The new medicine is made of herbs and from the oils of skunks and rattle snakes. It was originally the result of the work of Geronimo, medicine man of the Apaches, but according to Lance, the secret was transmitted to him by Geronimo, shortly before the death of the old chieftian, because of favors granted in former years.

When Mr. Rockfeller offered $1,000 reward, several years ago for the restoration of health, Lance sent him sample bottles. The oil king never sent for more medicine but in a letter he declared the samples had been of great benefit He enclosed a check for $1,000, says Lance, and requested that the new discovery be called the "Oil King Cure" That established the name

After a fight of three years, a patent has been secured from the government patent office and Lance is busily preparing to place it on the market. Hundreds of testimonials are being collected and employees have been sent into all the woods of Southwest Oklahoma, in quest of skunks and snakes from which to draw the necessary oil supply.

Lance himself spends night after night in quest of the particular kind of herb required and of the skunk peculiarly adapted to giving forth medicinal oils and is offering $20 a gallon for oils supplied by other people

News Forecast for the Coming Week

Washington, D. C, Dec 17.—The near approach of Christmas will see the customary lull in political and public affairs. Little real work is expected of Congress, which will adjourn at the end of the week for the holiday recess.

President Taft will take advantage of the slowing down of the official machinery by running over to Brooklyn to deliver an address before the Young Republican Club of that city Tuesday night.

Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul will celebrate the golden jubilee of his ordination to the priesthood on Thursday, and it is expected the anniversary will be made the occasion for a signal manifestation of the love and esteem in which the venerable prelate is held by Americans of all creeds and classes

A notable wedding of the week will be that of Miss Edith Pulitzer the eldest daughter of the late Joseph Pulitzer and William S. Moore. The wedding will take place Thursday at the Pulitzer home in New York City, and it will be a very quiet affair on account of the recent death of the bride's father.

Unless the governor of Illinois grants a respite there will be a quadruple hanging in Chicago Friday, the first that has taken place in that city since the execution of the Haymarket anarchists. The prospective victims of the gallows are four young men convicted of the murder last October of a truck farmer

Of interest in naval circles will be the presentation on Monday of a magnificent silver service to the battleship Florida The service is one of the finest ever presented to an American warship Funds for its purchase were raised by popular subscription aided by a generous appropriation from the State of Florida. The presentation will take place at Rouscola.

I. A. FARRIS, The Groceryman

PREPARATION for the CELEBRATION of the birth of Him who said "It is more blessed to give than to receive" is being made throughout the civilized world. This same man was laid to rest in Joseph's New Tomb.

The desire and the spirit of REMEMBRANCE is not new. It was manifested in the crude workings of the savage. The world stands in awe before the Pyramids of Egypt. It has been the ambition of every sculptor and artist to excel the Greeks, and our present day MEMORIALS are the admiration and achievement of modern art. If you intend placing a memorial before the New Year your time is short. Remember those dear departed loved ones. IT IS THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS.

SEVENTY SEVEN AVIATORS WERE KILLED IN 1911

Progress in Science and Art of Flying Has Been Costly in Human Life

New York, Dec. 17.—The progress in the science of aviation during the year now drawing to a close has been costly in human life. Beginning with the death of Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge, the first person killed in an aeroplane, in 1908, the list of fatalities has rapidly increased, especially in the present year, when the deaths more than doubled the combined number for the three preceding years. In 1908 one man lost his life, in 1909 four, in 1910 thirty-two, and to date for the present year seventy-seven persons have been killed.

In 1911, as in preceding years, France has contributed by far the largest number of victims, her list totalling 25, including one woman, Mme. Denzie Moore, who fell at Etempes on July 21 last.

German airmen who lost their lives this year number 14, English 7, Russian 4, Italian, Australian and Japanese, 2 each. Servia, Spain, Belgium, Brazil, Peru and Cuba contributed one each to the death roll of the year.

Whereas in the earlier days of the science of aviation only the most fitted, mentally and physically, dared flights, nowadays great numbers of amateurs do so. As a consequence the deaths for the present year included a number of aviation pupils. Double fatalities, in which rider and passenger were killed, also were common, while on June 18 last three Frenchmen, Capt. Princeteau, T. Le Martin, and M. Landron, were burned to death in midair as a result of the explosion of the aeroplane motor.

While aviation has been carried on almost as extensively in Canada as elsewhere it is interesting to note that no fatality was recorded in that country during the present year. In striking contrast is the record of the United States (including Porto Rico) in which a total of 15 aviators have met death in 1911.

The complete list of American aviators that were victims for the year is as follows:

April 26—William G. Purvis, died at Baton Rouge, La., as result of a fall on March 5.

May 10—Lieut. George E. M. Kelly, U. S. A., killed by fall at San Antonio, Texas.

May 17—A. V. Hardie, an amateur, killed by fall at Los Angeles.

July 13—P. A. Kreamer, killed by fall in biplane at Chicago.

Aug. 15—William R. Badger, crushed to death by his machine at Chicago.

Aug. 16—St. Croix Johnstone, fell into Lake Michigan from height of 1,000 feet at Chicago aviation meet.

Sept. 1—J. J. Frisbie, killed by fall at Norton, Kansas, went up in a cripled machine because spectators called him a faker.

Sept. 10—John W. Rosenbaum, killed while making a trial flight at De Witt, Iowa.

Sept. 22—Frank W. Miller, burned to death in midair at Troy, Ohio, as result of explosion of gasoline tank.

FRENZIED FINANCIER FACES HIS TRIAL

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 17.—The many persons who suffered financial loss through the failure several years ago of the Central Bank of Mississippi are looking forward with much interest to the trial of W. I. Price, which is scheduled to begin Monday. Rice was the promoter of the bank and in entire control of the institution. The bank was capitalized at half a million dollars, but when it closed its doors, during the financial panic of 1907, it had less than ten dollars in the vaults.

Revelations following the bank's failure tended to show, according to the authorities who conducted the investigation, that Rice was a typical "Get Rich Quick Wallingford." He is alleged to have started a "wild-cat" bank and inaugurated other schemes of finance in Kentucky, Missouri, Illinois and several other States. Efforts to learn his whereabouts after the failure of the Central Bank of Mississippi authorities located the former banker at his home in Morehead, Ky., and after successfully fighting a habeas corpus proceeding that was brought to resist the requisition, returned him to Jackson to await trial on charges of embezzlement and violations of the State banking laws.

Notice To Stockholders.

FIGHTING DICK TO RETIRE FROM NAVY

Rear Admiral Wainwright Has Seen Long Period of Active and Valiant Service.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—The official life of "one of the greatest fighters best fellows and most beloved officers the service afloat has ever had" expired at midnight tonight when by reason of the fact that tomorrow will be the sixty second anniversary of his birth, Rear Admiral Richard Wainwright, Aid for Operation in the Navy Department will be retired from active service.

No officer in the United States Navy today is better known or better liked than "Fighting Dick" Wainwright. His record of service is long and efficient. He graduated from the naval academy in 1868 but it was not until the early nineties that his name began to be heard outside of the service. He was executive officer of the battleship Maine when she was blown up in Havana harbor.

"I will never set my foot on Cuban soil until the Maine is avenged," Captain Wainwright declared as the waters closed over the twisted and torn hull of the American battleship as it carried down to their death 266 of its sailors and marines. For weeks, from dawn to dark, Wainwright toiled beside the wreck, directing the divers work and recovering the bodies of the dead. On April 5, long after Capt. Sigsbee and his subordinates had been relieved of their painful task, Wainwright, the sole surviving officer of the Maine left in Havana harbor, pulled down the weather-stained flag that had floated day and night from the shrouds of the wrecked battleship.

When war was declared with Spain Captain Wainwright was among the first to apply for active service. He was delighted when he was placed in command of J. P. Morgan's transformed pleasure yacht, the Corsair. The little vessel was renamed the Gloucester in honor of the Massachusetts city where Wainwright was born.

BENEFITS FROM VACANT LOT GARDENS

Washington, Dec. 17.—Civic economic and social benefits were derived by Minneapolis from the "garden club campaign" carried on there during the past season for the purpose of having all the city's vacant lots turned into flower and vegetable beds, according to Leroy J. Boughner, of Minneapolis, who told the American Civic Association in convention here today of the "vacant lot garden" work done in his home city.

It was a matter of civic pride, not an economic motive, which early last spring started the garden idea, Mr. Boughner explained. A civic celebration was to be held early in July, he said, "so we decided to have gardens to beautify the city for its hundred thousand visitors." The fact that there were 5000 acres of vacant lots in the city, "sufficient to supply the entire state with vegetables," was not enough appeal to get the citizens of Minneapolis interested; but the appeal to their civic pride caused them to plant 2,000,000 square feet to vegetables and 250,000 to flowers, said the speaker.

Mr. Boughner held Minneapolis up as a model for other cities, pointing out in detail how the vacant lots there had been transformed into bowers of flower and vegetable beauty, and called attention to some of the mistakes which had been made. So successful was this year's Garden Club campaign however that it will be continued with renewed vigor, Mr. Boughner declared during the coming year.

"A garden is a bit of land where plants and people grow and love each other," said the speaker in describing the benefits of the work. First and foremost he placed the fact that "the use of vacant lots had satisfied the farm craze, had taught more than 700 men and women whether he desired to go back to the land. How better could a man find out that upon the small patch of land that lies next to his home?"

From an economic standpoint, Mr. Boughner declared that "so many vegetables were grown on the vacant lots of Minneapolis that tomatoes were plentiful at 75 cents a bushel whereas a year ago they were scarce and sold for $81.50 a bushel."

A third benefit he found in this, that "most of those who had gardens belonged to the office class whose opportunities for getting out in the fresh air are small." Traveling about he said he saw hundreds of "glowing faces" as a result of "hoeing and weeding and murdering cut worms."

Again there was such a contrast this year, he declared between the lots operated by the Garden Club and those which it had not touched that "the mayor has instructed the police during the season of 1912 to enforce the ordinance covering the cutting of weeds and removal of rubbish from vacant lots" which ordinance had fallen somewhat into disuse.

The excellent impression which visitors gain of a city, Mr. Boughner pointed out as a great advantage. The model vacant lot garden at the fair grounds, he said, was seen by 750,000 people.

In a social way the results were great, he asserted. As a concrete example of this he cited a garden in a block where lived Jews, a Norwegian, two Germans and a New England family. Before the garden experiment none of the families had ever had anything in common, but before the summer was over, said Mr. Boughner, "all the families were visiting freely. The gardens in many instances were social centers."

In telling of how the citizens were aroused to join the Garden Club, Mr. Boughner who is its president and who was chairman of the garden committee of this year's "civic celebration" declared that various methods were used but that he found that "intelligent newspaper publicity alone will cover a city with gardens."
